RALPH MCGILL

Man Will Go Where He Wants

This might be described as the age in which ministers, priests and rabbis have amplifiers in their pulpits, but God continues to speak to man in the same still, small voice.

There are not many who are saying "Lend me your ears."

One gets the impression that presently the mood of the country, our country, is not to listen to anyone. This may be because none has proved the right to be heard.

It was just a few weeks ago when national defense was a desperate issue. But one small satellite and the impact of a recession subdued that issue.

Today the government is not able to attract many ears. It is pretty plain it is doing what all governments do, more or less. It is taking the line of least resistance. That means it will do nothing until there is such a sense of urgency on the part of the people that they will go along with some forthright action. But by that time it will be too late.

Drift

It would make sense, for example, if the nation should seem to be heading into a long strike-bound period over wages, to freeze prices and wages. If costs and wages go up, then prices will mount. And the recession will deepen.

It is a time when the most vital forces loose in the world are hate and fear, nuclear bombs and missiles.

There are certain symbols. Algeria, Little Rock and Suez... each of these brings to mind the power of hate and fear. Nor is there any way to dismiss them. Indeed, their number may grow. Forces and laws are at work.

Werner von Braun, the one-time German scientist, now our leading missile expert, has paid an almost lyrical tribute to space.

"Some think of the earth as a safe and comfortable planet," he said, "and they say that space is a hostile environment. This is not really true. Earth is protected by its blanket of atmosphere, to be sure, but it is a disorderly place and unpredictable. It is full of storms and winds, of fogs and ice, of earthquakes. It is also full of people—people with thermonuclear bombs. "There is beauty in space and it is orderly. There is no weather and there is regularity. It is predictable. Just look at our little Explorer; you can set your clock by it... literally. It is more accurate than your clock. Everything in space obeys the laws of physics. If you know those laws and obey them, space will treat you kindly. And don't tell me man doesn't belong out there. Man belongs where he wants to go..."

All that is true. But in his passion for orderliness and law, Dr. Von Braun forgets that man doesn't know where he wants to go out there any more than he knows where he wants to go on earth.

There are other laws than those of physics. Hate and fear have laws equally as inexorable. Destruction is the wages of ignorance of either law.

Egghead

This is a time when the voices of philosophers are being raised. And, while no one really is being heard, the egghead now has about as much audience as the tycoon and the political savant.

Indeed, it is this pressure which, for good or bad is going to bring on summit talks with the Russians. It is this feeling that the philosophers may know as much as the senators and congressmen, which for better or worse, is going to bring on an easing of tensions.

But if we as a nation cannot bring on an easing of our own domestic tensions as those of the world relax, we will not gain much and will in time suffer therefrom.

Man belongs where he wants to go. But where does he want to go? And if he doesn't know where he wants to go on earth, where will he find directions in space? And if one does not think that brute forces can triumph in this, the last half of the 20th century, remember Hungary.

There are other laws as exact as those of physics, even though they may not be put down in formulas.

Russians Accept Ministers Parley As Summit Step

By WILLIAM J. JORDEN
(Copyright 1958 by The New York Times Co.)
MOSCOW, March 3—The Soviet Union released tonight the text of its message to France accepting a foreign ministers conference as a prelude to a meeting of chiefs of state of East and West.

It seemed clear that the conditions set forth by Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in his message to French Foreign Minister Christian Pineau for such a gathering would not be acceptable to the Western powers.

Moscow suggested that the foreign ministers meeting—which it originally spurned and now accepts—should be held in Geneva in April. This, it said, would be preliminary to a summit meeting in June.

It was clear, however, that the foreign ministers would not be expected, in the Kremlin's view, to come to any firm or fast agreement except on technicalities. It would be their main job to work out an agenda for the summit conference and to determine when and where such a meeting should be held, as well as which countries should take part.

Gromyko eliminated the possibility of real disagreement among the foreign ministers on an agenda by stating that "only those questions which all participants in the conference are ready to discuss should be included."

GERMAN UNITY
In other words, each country taking part in a summit meeting would have a veto over the problems that would be considered. The Soviet Union, for example, would not agree to discuss or even hear the views of another country on any question it preferred not to consider.

One such question, Gromyko said, was the school decision. The impression in Virginia is that the Prince Edward citizens will close the schools in the face of any final integration order. The case is thus potentially a crucial test of the Supreme Court's 1954 school decision.

In 1955, in its opinion carrying forward the school decision, the Supreme Court left to the federal district courts the primary responsibility for determining the pace of school integration. It said they were in the best position to weigh "local conditions."

The vital question in the Prince Edward case is whether the Supreme Court intended to let the district courts have discretion to allow an indefinite delay in integration.

Sterling Hutcheson, federal district judge in Richmond, Va., read the Supreme Court opinion as giving him that discretion. Last year he rejected a motion

Gasoline Prices Rise Here After Wholesale Boost

A wholesale gasoline markup Monday increased retail prices in the metropolitan area.

Effects of a 2.7 cents a gallon wholesale price increase to major brand dealers caused fluctuating prices. A survey showed prices up about 2 cents on regular and premium gasolines at major oil company stations. Some dealers marked up prices Sunday.

Milton F. Allen, executive secretary of the Georgia Assn. of Petroleum Retailers, said the 2.7 cents will have to be absorbed by the consumer.

Independent retailers were holding regular gasoline to about 25.9 cents, while major brand dealers were reported Monday to have generally raised their prices for regular to 31.9 cents plus sales tax.

SEAFORD, N.Y., March 3—The case of the Herrmann house is a month old today. Last night, after four full days of quiescence, it kicked up again.

The case remains a who-done-it without a crime, a criminal or a solution. But it has a very tangible "scene," a quantity of "evidence"—smashed or damaged household ware—and a frustrated detective.

It also has had many specialized "private investigators." They have brought equipment ranging from an electronic vibration detector to a willow dowsing stick. They have gone away without firm conclusions.

A remarkable thing about the case is that no matter how unusual it may seem, in 1958, it is

MEETING PLEASING HIM
Russia's Menshikov

Ike Wants Real Job For Parley

WASHINGTON, March 3 (AP)—President Eisenhower got a first-hand report from Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Menshikov today on the Kremlin's call for a foreign minister's meeting in April and a summit conference in June.

Officials said Eisenhower plans a quick reply.

The contents of the Soviet note were a tightly held secret in Washington. However, Moscow radio disclosed it suggested an April foreign ministers meeting paving the way for a heads of government session in June.

TACKLE TENSION

The U.S. reply, according to well-informed officials, would:

1. Insist that any foreign ministers meeting do more than set an agenda, time and place and pick participants for a foreign ministers meeting. The United States wants the foreign ministers to tackle the tension-creating issues.
2. Stress the West's demands that any summit conference hold a prospect of fostering world peace instead of raising false hopes.
3. Reject any departure into an evenly divided summit conference table which would equate a Soviet satellite with a sovereign Western nation, such as Poland against Britain and Czechoslovakia versus France.

The State Department had no immediate comment on the Soviet publication of its new note.

"I found the President looking healthy, and he's very cheerful," Menshikov said after today's meeting. "He's frank and straightforward and open-hearted—qualities that we Russians like."

Old Red Links Don't Affect GI Discharges, Court Rules

WASHINGTON, March 3 (AP)—The Supreme Court held 8-1 today that soldiers accused of Communist activity before induction may not be denied honorable discharges on that ground alone.

The ruling apparently means that two New Yorkers who received less than honorable discharges will have that action voided in favor of fully honorable discharges. But further action will be required in U.S. District Court here, where the men had lost before.

The majority opinion cited a law which provides that no person may be discharged from military service without a certificate of discharge issued by the secretary of the Army.

Another section of the same law pointed to by the court calls for review by the Army Review Board of the secretary's action.

One section "expressly requires that the finding of the Army Review Board shall be based upon all available records of the Army relating to the person requesting such review."

"We think the word 'records' as used in the statute means records of military service, and that the statute, properly construed, means that the type of discharge to be issued is to be determined solely by the soldier's military record in the Army," the majority added.

He Finds New Shoes Just Right To Run In

In one case Monday the crumstomer was not right. Patrolman T. J. Roberts and J. N. Anderson said a Negro man walked into a shoe store at 66 Peachtree St. and asked for a pair of shoes, size 11-B. An employee, I. Nerenbaum, brought out a pair, priced $12.95.

The customer tried them on and exclaimed: "Just what I want."

He bolted from the store with the salesman in futile pursuit.

Ike Details Disability Agreement

Nixon To Get Total Control

By EDWIN L. DALE JR.
(Copyright 1958, The New York Times Co.)
WASHINGTON, March 3—The White House announced today the details of a formal agreement between President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon on what is to be done in case the President is disabled.

The plan contemplates that the vice president would become acting president and would assume "the powers and duties of the office until the inability has ended."

The determination of inability would be made by the President himself "if possible." He would "so inform the vice president."

APPROPRIATE CONSULTATION

In case of an inability "which would prevent the President from so communicating with the vice president," the vice president would make the determination "after such consultation as seems to him appropriate under the circumstances."

No matter which man had decided upon the President's inability, the President himself "would determine when the inability had ended and at that time would resume the full exercise of the powers and duties of the office."

The White House announcement said the two men had agreed that the procedures were "in accord with the purposes and provisions of Article 2, Section 1 of the Constitution, dealing with presidential disability."

"They believe," the announcement continued, "that these procedures, which are intended to apply to themselves only, are in no sense outside or contrary to the Constitution but are consistent with its present provisions and implement its clear intent."

ATTY. GEN. ROGERS

James C. Hagerly press secretary, said today's statement had been drawn up this morning in the President's office by the two men, together with Atty. Gen. Rogers. He said the attorney general concurred in the constitutional aspects of the statement.

Hagerly stressed that the plan was meant to apply only to Eisenhower and Nixon and did not imply any abandonment of the administration's request to Congress for a constitutional amendment dealing with the problem for future presidents.

The press secretary would not say whether any written agreement on procedures for presidential disability had existed before today's statement. But whether or not such an agreement existed, the procedures are now formalized.

MIXED REACTION

Reaction in Congress to the announcement was mixed. There was little outright opposition, but considerable opinion that a new

Mack Quits FCC And Ike Accepts 'Wise' Decision

Raise Offer Is Charged To Griffin

By BRUCE GALPHIN
Banks County Rep. Tom Martin charged Monday that Gov. Griffin offered him a $25-a-month raise to vote for the rural roads bill and later fired him from his state job as "deadwood."

Meanwhile, five more revenue department employees were dismissed Monday, bringing the total of Griffin administration "housecleaning" firings to 21.

$25 A MONTH
Martin, who had a job with the state highway department, wrote a strongly-worded letter to Griffin, stating:

"You will recall a conversation you and I had in Parlor A of the Georgia Hotel on Wednesday night prior to the voting on the road bill when you granted me a $25 per month raise if I would support your road bill."

"Now you fire me because I am deadwood. Was I deadwood when you were going to give me the $25 per month raise?"

The Banks representative was not present on the day of the roads bill vote. "I was at home sick with influenza and you have a doctor's certificate to that effect," he wrote.

VOTED GRIFFIN WAY

Martin stated in his letter that for three years he had voted for every Griffin proposal and had almost lost his reelection fight in 1956 for voting for tax increases. He also said he "was working for the state highway department before you were elected governor."

The letter concluded with an assertion that Griffin had lost political ground. "In fact," Martin wrote, "I do not believe you could muster enough strength to be elected to any office in the state of Georgia."

Fired Monday by Revenue Commissioner T. V. Williams were:

Sam A. Smith, levying officer with the Macon sales tax office; John Hendrix, tax examiner in the Gainesville sales tax office; H. W. Fields and Otis Lewis, both enforcement officers at Swainsboro, and John Cooper, Negro, employed at the Atlanta state liquor warehouse.

"They weren't all for political activities," Williams said of the firings. He repeated the same general charges he gave in dismissing 10 employees Friday: being "deadwood," not carrying a "fair share of the load" or for "other infractions."

Roy V. Harris said Monday that he was approached by a "high pressure salesman" to buy stock in Highway Board Chairman Roy F. Chalker's political paper, The Georgia Recorder.

Harris, who said he refused to buy any, related the incident in the current edition of his own political paper, The Augusta Courier.

Harris said the salesman, whom he didn't identify, told him "it would be to my interest to buy at least one share of stock in his corporation at the meager price of $500 per share."

"He explained to me that it would be very beneficial for me to be in business with the chairman of the Highway Board," Harris wrote. "He said he knew that I was interested in roads and that it couldn't hurt me any."

conference. "The General Assembly fought it out and there's no need for me to get up any plan of my own."

The Legislature approved legislation authorizing the Ports Authority to buy such property as it sought to buy from Central subject to the approval of the State Properties Acquisition Committee.

RESOLUTION DEFEATED

However, a resolution specifically endorsing the purchase of the Savannah property was defeated on the last day of the session in the Senate after passing the House.

In negotiations between the Ports Authority and the Central of Georgia, the state was to buy the railroad's docks and an industrial site near the state-owned docks known as the Whitehall plantation. The price was tentatively set at $3,750,000.

State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr., one of the three members of the acquisition committee, agreed that the action of the Legislature ruled out the overall purchase proposal.

day of increasing pressure on Mack to step down. Included were a threat of impeachment, and persisting reports that the White House awaited Mack's "voluntary" move to quit.

Mack's letter, emphasizing he was resigning "voluntarily," reached the White House at 5 p.m. The President's response was delivered to Mack's residence about 6:30.

USEFULNESS IMPAIRED

The President wrote that he agreed with the commissioner that "your usefulness as a member of the commission is so seriously impaired that you are wise to tender your resignation."

The 48-year-old commissioner thus removed himself as the immediate target of an investigation by the House subcommittee on legislative oversight into federal regulatory agencies.

The subcommittee has been concentrating for three weeks on charges that Mack received payments from Thurman A. White, a Miami lawyer friend active in behalf of the winning applicant for a Miami television channel. Mack acknowledged accepting "personal loans" from Whiteside. However, he declared they had no influence on his vote for the winner, a National Airlines subsidiary.

MORE CAREFUL
"Perhaps I should have been more careful in the handling of my personal affairs," Mack wrote the President, "but I have not violated my oath of office in this instance or in any other during my career in public life."

The President, who appointed Mack, a Florida Democrat, to the FCC in 1955, replied he was not "attempting to pass judgment" on questions the commissioner had raised.

Eisenhower added that he believed he had "no alternative except to accept your resignation."

Housing Is Rushed By Senate

$3 Billion Measure Aims for Upturn

By WILLIAM S. WHITE
(Copyright 1958, The New York Times Co.)
WASHINGTON, March 3—Senate Democratic leaders have given top priority to a $3,000,000,000 housing bill in their program of antirecession legislation.

They have laid down an emergency schedule for hearings and action by the Senate Banking and Currency Committee on this measure. They intend to bring it to the Senate floor for passage within two weeks.

The Democrats have decided to make housing legislation the first major economic action of this session of Congress. They believe that in no other field could an infusion of federal money so quickly produce a visible upturn in the national economy.

ECONOMIC INQUIRY

This development in Democratic policy on the recession was made known today while the Senate Finance Committee was starting a broad inquiry into the country's economic situation.

That committee's chairman, Sen. Byrd, (D-Va.), announced that 104 business and government leaders were being asked to file their views on the cause and cure of the recession.

The author of the Democratic bill is Sen. Sparkman (Ala.), the party's chief spokesman on housing matters. He is being supported by the top men in his party, including the Senate Democratic leader, Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas. Word has gone out to the party rank and file that speed is essential.

CONFLICTS WITH IKE'S

The Sparkman bill runs head-on into the Eisenhower administration's far more limited proposals.

The administration announced tonight that its own program would be introduced tomorrow in the Senate and House.

The administration's bill, all major details of which had been revealed in the President's budget message in January, would have these principal features:

1. To raise from $20,000 to $30,000 the present maximum price limit on houses for which federal housing mortgage insurance is available.

INCREASE INSURANCE

2. To increase the nearly exhausted mortgage insurance authority of the Federal Housing Administration by $3,000,000,000.

3. To set up a five-year extension of the slum-clearance program with ultimate federal grants totaling $1,350,000,000.

Of the $3,000,000,000 the Democrats are determined to make available to speed private housing, a great proportion would be used for government financing of housing mortgages through purchases by the Federal National Mortgage Association.

The aim would be to guarantee $1,500,000,000 worth of home mortgages for immediate or early construction, mainly through the Veterans Administration program at an interest rate of 4 1/2 per cent.

Most of the rest of the $3,000,000,000 would be made available to the President to finance other home mortgages as an anti-recession device.

Reds Repeat Refusal To Free 5 in N. Korea

(Copyright, 1958, by The New York Times Co.)

SEOUL, March 3—The North Koreans today refused to hand over two Americans, two Germans and a South Korean who were aboard a Korean National Airlines twin-engine airplane which was mysteriously flown into North Korea on Feb. 16. It was believed Communist agents disguised as passengers aboard the plane threatened the pilot and forced him to fly to North Korea.

Mrs. FDR Asks Ike To Read News

NEW YORK, March 3 (UP)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said today that President Eisenhower could discover a lot about the needs and moods of the people if he overcame his "disinclination" to read the newspapers.

"As I understand it, he prefers to have the news digested for him or to be briefed orally on the news," she said.

"That, I suppose, is a military habit. But I do not believe it is an effective system for the chief executive of a great and divergent country to form opinions on the basis of what his assistants think is the important part of the news."

Mrs. Roosevelt made the statement in the concluding article of her five-part autobiography in the Saturday Evening Post.

"It seems to me that such knowledge is of great importance to the President because it enables him to understand the issues of the day in terms of how they affect the people," she said.

Mrs. Roosevelt also said that she did not believe there was much question that Vice President Richard M. Nixon would succeed Eisenhower as leader of the Republican Party.

Hertz, German minister and representative of the South Korean Red Cross, were on hand at a secretariat meeting of the Military Armistice Commission to receive the American pilot, William P. Hobbs; Lt. Col. Howard W. McClan, USAF; Johannes W. Hinrichs and his wife, and a Korean desiring to return home.

Among 32 passengers were Col. Kim Ki Wan, chief of South Korean Air Force information, and national assemblyman Yoo Bong Soon, a member of President Rhee's liberal party.

Today's meeting, which was called by the United Nations command, was the result of a Communist Pyongyang broadcast Saturday indicating these personnel would be handed over to official representatives of the U. S., German and Korean Red Cross at Panmunjom or any place mutually agreed upon.

But as the meeting progressed it had become apparent that the Communists were pushing for a "political conference" between North and South Korean authorities.

As a high American official at the meeting put it, the Communists are holding these personnel for ransom in the hope of gaining recognition of their government, which neither the U. S., German nor South Korean government recognize.

The Communists repeatedly rejected a U. N. command request that the personnel be delivered at a secretariat meeting of the Military Armistice Commission, contending the commission "has nothing to do with the matter."

Italian Couple, Judges, Prosecutors Excommunicated for Trial of Bishop

By ARNALDO CORTESI
(Copyright 1958 by The New York Times Co.)

ROME, March 3—The automatic excommunication of Mauro Bellandi, a grocer in the Tuscan town of Prato, and his wife Loriani for causing their bishop to be tried and sentenced by an Italian penal court for criminal defamation of character was announced by the Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano this afternoon.

The judges, public prosecutor, counsel for the prosecution and everyone else who in any way contributed to the sentencing of the bishop have also been excommunicated.

At the same time Pope Pius XII, who regards the trial and sentencing of the Bishop of Prato as evidence of resurgent anticlericalism in Italy, showed his bitterness and grief by suspending the celebration of the 19th anniversary of his coronation, which was to be held in St. Peter's Basilica on March 12.

HURT DEEPLY

The Vatican pointed out that no measure could have given more convincing proof of how deeply the Pope has been hurt by the sentencing of one of his bishops. It is necessary to go back to 1931, when the church was in full conflict with the Fascist regime, to find a precedent for the Pope's actions. In that year Pope Pius XI cancelled the journey to Padua of a cardinal legate who was to represent him at rites that were to mark the seventh centenary of the death of St. Anthony of Padua.

In the present case the Vatican can hardly accuse the Italian government itself of anti-clericalism, since the Christian Democratic party, which is governing Italy without allies, is a party that professes reverence for Christian principles. Nevertheless the Vatican feels the church has suffered a grievous wrong at the hands of the Italian judiciary and the government did not exert itself sufficiently in defense of the church's position. Relations between the Vatican and the Italian government have therefore become strained.

NOT DECREED BY COURT

The excommunication of Bellandi and his wife was not decreed by any ecclesiastical court. It followed automatically on their bringing suit against their bishop. Osservatore Romano made known that they were both to be regarded as excommunicated in a comment it published on the case of the Bishop of Prato.

Osservatore Romano pointed out that canon 2341 and canon

2334 of the canon law apply to what the Bellandis and an Italian court did against the bishop.

Canon 2341 says that anyone who dare to cause a cardinal or other high dignitary or prelate of the church, including bishops, to be tried by civil judges "incurs ipso facto excommunication reserved in a special manner to the Holy See." This is the canon that applies to the Bellandis. Canon 2334 says that anyone who "directly or indirectly prevents the exercise of ecclesiastical jurisdiction" is subject to excommunication latae sententiae, reserved in a special manner to the Holy See.

This is the canon that applies to the three judges, the public prosecutor and counsel for prosecution.

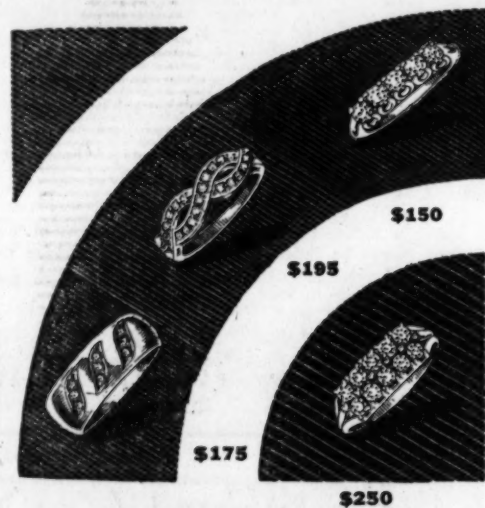

The Bishop of Prato is 42-year-old Msgr. Pietro Fiordelli. He was found guilty last Saturday of criminal defamation of character by a Florence tribunal and sentenced to pay a fine amounting to $56. Costs and damages were awarded to the plaintiffs, Mauro and Loriani Bellandi, whom the bishop had branded as "public sinners" living in "scandalous concubinage" because they were married in a civil ceremony instead of in a church.

'It's Still Hard Work,' Says Farmer of Year

There's plenty of rough, hard work on the farm, says Georgia's outstanding young farmer of the year.

John C. Wilkes, 34, farmer from Lyons and father of five, says that despite new machinery and so-called modern methods of farming, it still takes plenty of muscle power and rugged work to get the job done.

Wilkes was named the state's outstanding young farmer by the Georgia Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Butler St. Slum Plan Approved

The aldermanic board Monday approved a preliminary report for the 100-million-dollar 170-acre Butler street urban renewal and rehabilitation project for Negroes and ordered it submitted for approval to federal agencies.

Alderman Hamilton Douglas Jr., chairman of the urban renewal committee, asked that the studies made by the Atlanta Housing Authority be offered for sanction to the Urban Renewal Administration, Washington.

The project is the second of three centrally located projects to reach the preliminary report stage. University Center, a 315-acre Negro project, was the first.

CHANCE FOR CHANGE

Douglas said the Butler project plans are preliminary and ample opportunity will be given for revision and change when the project reaches final planning. It is expected that the facility can be launched the latter part of the year along with the two other planned Atlanta projects.

The third project, the 177-acre Washington-Rawson street area white project is being planned but has been delayed for several months pending a final decision on location of the West Expressway leg. Col. Malcolm Jones, urban renewal director, said work is now being concentrated on that project to expedite it.

NET COST

Net cost of the project, that is acquiring and preparing the needed land, is estimated at $7,225,444, of which the federal government will pay two-thirds. Local one-third share will be $2,408,481 with an estimated $1,336,297 in non-cash grants, such as street improvements, schools and other facilities, leaving the city to provide $864,868 in cash. First estimate of the net cost of the project were $4,293,000, but many changes have been made, pushing the total net cost as of now to $7,225,444. Upon completion, the Butler street redevelopment is expected to have

Police Chief Gets Hearing In Doraville

The Doraville city commission Monday night set a public hearing for its next meeting at 8 p.m. March 17 on its controversial dismissal of Police Chief D. H. Kidd.

A crowd of citizens packed the small city hall and stood around outside as the commission heard an appeal on the decision. Mayor Ed Heibel said Kidd was dismissed Saturday afternoon after four years as chief.

The citizens withheld expressing opinions in the matter when the commission agreed to hold the hearing, which was requested by Kidd.

In discussing the dismissal, commissioners mentioned general charges of incompetence, inefficiency and refusal to follow directions of the commission.

Aly Khan Begins His U.N. Duties

Cyclists Regret 'Mixup' at Conyers

The president of the Atlanta Motorcycle Club said Monday that he was sorry cyclists competing in Sunday's endurance run had a mixup with Conyers police.

Henry Fridell said, "We didn't intend to insult the good people and police of Conyers with our endurance run and we're sorry we didn't consult with them before our run started."

Four cyclists were arrested Sunday when Conyers police set up a roadblock to stop what they called "an army of ants on motorcycles" from roaring through their town.

The four forfeited $17 collateral each Monday, Conyers Police Chief O. T. Adams said. He identified them as Benlon Lee Estes, Wilburn A. Johnson, George Stemen and Wesley P. Renfro.

Adams said he was at home Sunday when he was notified that wet, muddy motorcycle riders had come roaring into the town "like a swarm of bees." He said officers on duty stopped a dozen riders and ordered them to follow a patrol car to headquarters.

The four who later put up cash collaterals obeyed the order, Adams said. He added the others roared back into the woods and escaped.

"They were just as nice as they could be," he said. "They seemed under the impression that the clubs they were from had obtained permission for them to come through Conyers."

"It would have been perfectly all right so long as they remained within the speed limits and had legal mufflers on the motorcycles."

The cyclists were taking part in the annual Stone Mountain Endurance Run, sponsored by the Atlanta Motorcycle Club and the Georgia-Cracker Motorcycle Club. Fridell said that Sunday's outing was not a race but a run. Under American Motorcycle Assn. rules, riders are limited to back roads, trails, abandoned roads and power routes.

"We even discourage speed in our endurance runs," Fridell said. He pointed out that cyclists were penalized points if they passed a check point before their scheduled time. The average speed for each rider was 24 miles per hour, he said.

Fridell said that when he mapped out the course he set it up to hit the outskirts of Conyers.

"But a rider can't go anywhere without going in front of someone's home during such an endurance run," he added.

Eighty-eight cyclists started the run. Only five finished.

"We weren't out to act the fool," Fridell declared. "We were out to separate the men from the boys."

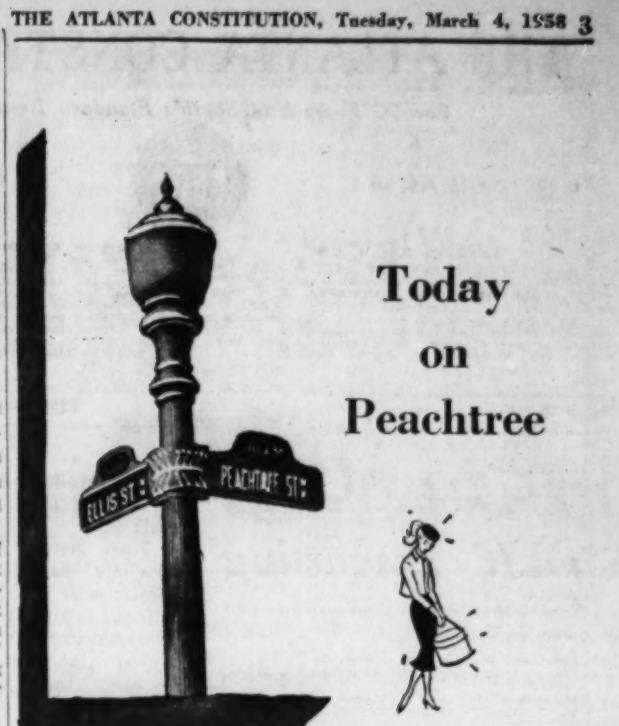

State Ex-Agent Pleads Guilty In Liquor Case

A former state revenue agent entered a plea of guilty in U.S. District Court Monday to federal charges of possessing moonshine liquor.

William H. Hughes, 49, operator of a restaurant near Ball Ground, will be brought back before U.S. District Judge Boyd Sloan for sentencing next week.

Federal revenue agents said a truck and 15 gallons of non-tax-paid whisky were seized after a surveillance of Hughes' Grill on Georgia Highway 5, near Ball Ground.

Hughes was a veteran agent of the State Revenue Department until ill health forced him to retire last year, the government agents said. They described him as having been "a fine officer" who had been assigned to work with them on a number of liquor cases.

Magna cum Beauty

Here's the happiest kind of news for every little girl who ever prayed: "Dear God, please make me grow up beautiful." Davison's and Seventeen magazine, who believe Heaven helps those who help themselves, now come up with a "Beauty Workshop" for teens that capsules a liberal education in beauty, charm, poise, fashion modeling (not to mention how to get the boys!) into five fascinating lessons. The school bell rings for the first beauty class tomorrow, Wednesday, at 4 p.m. in Davison's 6th floor Patio. Registrations close today at 6 p.m., so get a running start to our Starlet Circle on the Mezzanine to put your name on our list of budding beauties-to-be. The price is just $2.50 for the entire course (merely the cost of a handful of chocolate bars that are had for your complexion any way). At the first class you receive a stunning black-and-pink hat box just like New York's Big Time Models carry, and a 60-page Seventeen magazine Beauty Booklet. On Graduation Day, April 5th, you get a Diploma (you can frame it) and a chance to show off all you've learned on the runway in a glamorous Fashion Show. Davison's "Beauty Workshop" is the luckiest thing to happen to a Teen since naturally curly hair and big blue eyes were invented. Sign up today!

Genius and the Genie

In our 68 booming, bustling years of storekeeping, just about the only thing we haven't had on tap for our customers is an exclusive, on-the-spot Hat Designer. Now, praise be, we have. His name is Robert Curtiss. When other little boys were covering their homework with doodles, Bob was covering everything in sight (including the wallpaper) with delightful and imaginative drawings of hats. As he grew in years and art training he became bored with merely sketching hats on paper and yearned to put them on pretty heads. Now he has hung out his shingle at Davison's where he designs exclusive hats that wear the Curtiss label and dreams up rhapsodic custom-mades for the finicky femme who wants an original made for her alone. Bob modestly attributes his designing success to his two years of training with the celebrated Archie Eason and to a blue-draped and turbaned Genie, "Little Ro," 12 inches high, who sits on his shoulder and keeps genius burning. (The Genie also writes a note of congratulations to every new owner of a Curtiss hat). You may meet our dapper, blond designing genius and his Genie in the Millinery Salon, Second Floor. Give them only the haziest notion of your hat's desire (soaring rocket turban to flower-wreathed Watteau bonnet) and they'll take it from there. See Curtiss hats modeled each Wednesday at 12:15 p.m. at The Bonfire on Peachtree Road (formerly the Lobster House) and every noontime in Davison's Terrace Restaurant. Keep your eye on our Boy Wonder. Gorgeous hats from the House of Curtiss are already turning heads all over Dixie.

It's Shabby Politics And It's Disgusting

The Griffin administration is engaged in an exhibition of firing persons in state jobs, some under the merit system, who didn't jump through the hoop held in front of them by Cheney Griffin, the official "aide."

It is a shabby, shoddy exhibition, fully in keeping with the political reputations brought to the administration by those who direct it.

One is tempted to add the adjective "cheap" to shabby and shoddy. But this is not a cheap administration. It has managed to bypass the constitutional provision against putting the people in debt by an accelerated use of the "authority" dodge. It has somehow managed to make things cost more and more. There is nothing cheap about it insofar as the taxpayer is concerned.

This administration is, in a sense, the spiritual heir of the old Rivers administration which had a reputation for shoddiness, shabbiness and political immorality unmatched until this one came along.

The people of Georgia surely didn't expect anything else.

Gov. Griffin was elected by a minority vote. He received only about one-third of the ballots cast. He is not really a political accident, in that some shrewd manipulations were made in his behalf. The forces which wanted to defeat Candidate M. E. Thompson threw some help to Candidate Charles Gowan and also made personal appeals to county leaders in Mr. Griffin's behalf.

Cheney Griffin, the holder-of-the-hoop-through-which-all-employees-must-jump, has made a name for himself. It frequently is on the lips of state employees and those who are called to Cheney's office to discuss business with the state.

The brazen attempt to halt the Senate investigating committee by withholding funds could be made up through funds by public subscription. Maybe those business-people which have felt the heavy hand of this administration will contribute funds to this badly needed probe into state affairs.

Expressway Completion Concerns Entire Region

The just-completed Fulton County Grand Jury session quite properly went into a rather detailed study of problems standing in the way of a speedier completion of the expressway system and the downtown connectors.

The jury rightly calls this not just an Atlanta problem but one which concerns the entire state. As the distribution center for an entire region, completion of the connectors is a vital matter for business and industry throughout Georgia.

In other words, completion of the expressway and the connectors as part of the interstate highway system affects the economy of the entire state and region. All road blocks in the way should be removed as rapidly as possible.

In their discussion of expressway traffic, the jury made some other constructive suggestions. Especially do we need some kind of education program for expressway drivers, even to the extent of detailing additional officers for constant patrol and law enforcement until people do learn to drive. The expressways today are dangerous and threats to life and limb because of careless, ignorant drivers.

Other recommendations for better route-marking and exit signs and facilities are worthy of study.

But meanwhile, expressway construction and street improvement projects included in the recent bond issue should be speeded in every manner possible. Delays are not only holding back the City of Atlanta but hampering the state's economy through traffic congestion.

John Held's 'Flappers' Were Symbol of Era

John Held Jr. is dead at his New Jersey home and news of it will bring a twinge of pain (from remembering happier days) to those who are middle-aged and beyond. John Held was the cartoonist whose drawings of "flappers" caught the essence of the period known variously as "The Roaring 20's," "The Aspirin Age" and "The Era of Wonderful Nonsense."

His flappers were "cute," but ultra-sophisticated. They were all thin, flat-chested and clad in the sack-dress fashions of the time. Their helmets were at the knees. They wore those inverted flower-pot hats and they smoked cigarettes in holders. They drank bathtub gin, they "necked" and they liked speed in convertibles—with the top down. F. Scott Fitzgerald caught them and their male counterparts in his novels and short stories of what he called "The Jazz Age."

It was more than that. It was that of "The Lost Generation," the revolt against all that was provincial and confining, the flight from inner loneliness and a thumbing of the nose at conformity and its apostles.

John Held's defiant, sufficient and somehow pathetically endearing little flapper was the best symbol. A lot of gaffers, getting to be old gaffers, will recall with pleasure and with sorrow that their day, and hers, is gone forever.

4-H Members Merit Plaudits of Georgians

The current observance of National 4-H Week provides Georgians an opportunity to salute an organization composed of alert youths with shining records of solid achievement.

The 4-H program stresses the highest principles of good citizenship. Members learn by doing. In carrying out projects and objectives they are contributing toward a better way of life for themselves and their neighbors.

There are 143,940 members in Georgia. Along with the tremendous growth in the quantity of youths on the rolls has come a corresponding upgrading in the quality of the organization's various fields of endeavor.

Many of today's agricultural leaders, as well as leaders in other walks of life, owe much of their success to the valuable training they received in the 4-H program. Georgians can take pride in the many worthwhile accomplishments of the organization and its members.

While Others Fluoridate, Atlanta Procrastinates

Recommendations by the second consecutive Fulton County jury that Atlanta's water supply be fluoridated to reduce tooth decay should mean the city will act accordingly.

We hope that it does.

For reasons hard for us to understand and in face of a preponderance of scientific evidence, the City of Atlanta has stalled on a program now effective in 44 Georgia communities.

The immediate obstacle, as explained by Mayor Hartsfield, is the Plan of Improvement forbids the city to spend money for health.

Surely, the city water department and the Fulton County Health Department can work out an agreement on the project.

For that matter, it can be argued easily that health is the major, if not the only, reason for chlorination of a water supply. Chlorination, by the way, was bitterly opposed when first recommended. Now it is an accepted fact.

We agree with men of science that an issue involving science and health is not one for referendum.

However, if the city insists on hearing from the people on fluoridation, let us go to the polls.

We are confident an intelligent, progressive, enlightened Atlanta will be quick to endorse a health measure now bringing dental benefits to millions of Americans with injury to none whatsoever.

Ben Massell's Honors Are Richly Deserved

A story which was tailor-made to fit the American dream and the Horatio Alger tradition was unfolded in Atlanta at the start of the week. Benjamin Joseph Massell, the man who has remade the skyline of Atlanta, officially became a fellow of Brandeis University.

Ben Massell was brought to Atlanta as a child of 2 years. His parents were immigrants from Lithuania, now a part of the Soviet empire. They settled in Atlanta. They were devout, hard-working, but poor.

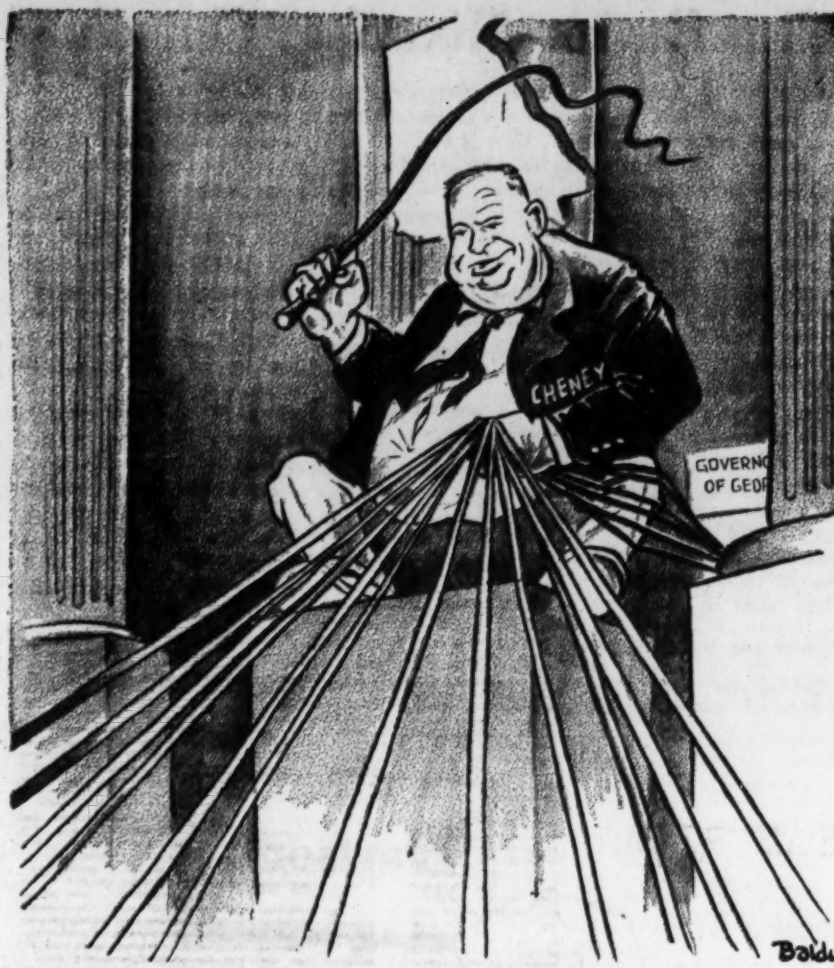

The boy Ben went to work as soon as he was able. At 16, for example, he was a copy boy for The Atlanta Constitution. He tried many occupations but it developed he had a genius for real estate. At a time when there was indecision, Ben Massell was decisive. He has contributed more to the physical Atlanta than any man in her long history.

Not many know of his contributions to hospitals and welfare in Atlanta. Israel and the refugees establishing homes there have interested him. The boy who had little education has made a major contribution to Brandeis University, which in 10 years has become one of the "quality" institutions in American education.

Now the boy who came as an infant child of immigrant parents is a fellow of that institution. It is a good, warming story and The Constitution congratulates one of its "old boys" and shares with his family and friends the pleasure given by this recognition.

Biology Professor Says Race With Russia In Education Will Be Long and Arduous

Forsyth—Will we catch up with Russia's present education advances?

Certainly not soon and to do it at all will require something very fundamental. There is a tremendous momentum to a well-thought-out program. Once Russia's school system was only a shadow of what it is now. But in a deliberate and determined program over years more and more scientific training has been carried out and capped with an ambitious program for technical and engineering advance.

Such a system once set up automatically keeps turning out a large amount of constantly improving human products from the scientific and technical side.

Only a similarly intensive program on our part can catch up and it is proverbial that a stern chase is a long chase. Few people realize how difficult such a race must be.

First Grade Called Source of the Trouble

Hahira — In The Constitution recently there were two reports concerning education or rather the lack of education as has been made evident by results obtained from tests which seem to be a prerequisite for appointment to the nation's service academies.

Sen. Talmadge reveals that of the 35 students certified to take the tests only seven made a passing mark and not one posted a mark higher than 75. Sen. Russell reveals that out of 32 certified for the tests by him only four scored higher than 70 and not one higher than 72.

The senators from other states report, "similar poor grades on the part of applicants from their states."

We at last are ready to admit "failure of our vaunted American educational system to prepare youths for competition in a world in scientific revolution."

It is not fair to place the blame for this trouble upon all the teachers of all the grades. The main source of this trouble is to be found in the first grade.

Our "system" has failed in the preparation of first-grade children to do second-grade work and, further, our system has failed to grasp the importance of this first-grade work being thoroughly mastered the first year at school.

Soldier in Alabama Enjoys Constitution

Ft. McClellan, Ala.—After reading some of the recent editorials and news items in The Constitution I, as a Negro, would like very much to express my views. I served in the Army at Ft. Benning from 1928 to 1931 and from 1934 to 1937. I started reading The Constitution and, as the old saying goes, "I took a liking to it."

I have made my home in New York City since 1937 but I never forgot The Constitution. I praised it there.

Now I am again serving in the Army at Ft. McClellan, Ala., and I have resumed reading it. I still think it is one of the fairest papers in the country. I think it is fairer than some New York papers.

This Is Very Costly Way To Build Taxpayers' Roads

There's new evidence that the General Assembly of Georgia should vote a medal for the 106 representatives who stood firm against attempts to pump 50 million dollars or more into wasteful long-term financing for the rural roads program.

The special Senate committee investigating how the first 100 million dollars was spent says interest payments alone may run 52 per cent of the actual construction cost.

Imagine that. Roads which many legislators had been given to believe were being built for about $18,000 a mile may finally cost a whopping $44,000 a mile, according to Committee Chairman Carl Sanders.

State Highway Board Chairman Roy Chalker's defense of the costly operation was about as weak as any we've ever heard, besides sorta rubbing us the wrong way like those irksome signs along the highways. You know the signs we mean: Another Georgia Rural Road Built by Georgia Rural Roads Authority, Marvin Griffin, Governor, and the Georgia Highway Department. Not a word about the fellow who really built them, the taxpayer.

Mr. Chalker's defense seemed to be based on the fact that interest paying is a vital part of the economy and that most home-buyers pay about 50 per cent in

Pause To Think Before You Speak

"If I could only keep my big mouth shut," said the comic-strip character. I thought of this the other morning as I was reading the book of James in the Bible. In the third chapter one finds a graphic description of the harm the tongue can do:

"Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth! And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity... it defileth the whole body... it is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison... Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not to be so."

It has been said that "talk is cheap," but often talk is the most expensive thing man can do. The ability to talk is one of the prime differences between man and animals. What sort of a world would this be if people could not talk?

But the trouble is that so often we talk before we have a thought to express.

Words can inspire a nation to heroic action. "Blood, sweat and tears"—as Churchill spoke those words, new spirit came into the people of the free world. Words can rescue a soul from despair, words can glorify God.

What a pity man so often degrades his power of speech! More than a hundred years ago Beth Day wrote a little poem entitled "Three Gates of Gold." This is one that I keep where I can see it often. She wrote:

"Make it pass—Before you speak, three gates of Gold—These narrow gates. First, 'Is it true?'—Then, 'Is it needful?' In your mind—Give truthful answer. And the next—Is last and narrowest, 'Is it kind?'—And if to reach your lips at last—It passes through these gateways three—Then you may tell the tale, nor fear—What the result of speech may be."

It has been said, "Sticks and stones may break my bones, but names can never hurt me." But that is not true. Wounds in the body can heal much quicker than the hurt in the heart made by hard words.

When we think of the words that hurt, we list first the profane words.

It is said, "The truth never hurt anybody." Sometimes the truth does hurt but it is a different kind of hurt than the hurt of a lie. If there is a day of judgment, and we know there is, we must face up to slandering and gossiping words.

Let us learn to keep our big mouths shut!

President Resolves Disability Question

WASHINGTON—Eisenhower has rendered the nation and the presidency a valuable service in removing all doubt that there will be any vacuum in the highest office if he suffers disability and is not aware of it. There never has been any doubt that if Eisenhower determined he was unable to serve further, he would himself certify his disability whereupon Vice President Nixon would instantly become acting president.

Now the President has made sure that during the remainder of his term there will be a clear and workable procedure in the event he should become disabled but not conscious of his own disability. He has done this through a "clear understanding" with Nixon and by putting this understanding in a letter which he has entrusted to the vice president, the members of the Cabinet and the assistant to the President, Sherman Adams.

The "clear understanding" which has been reached between Eisenhower and Nixon, according to my information, provides:

That if the President certifies his disability, the powers and duties but not the presidency itself shall devolve upon the vice president.

That Nixon will cease serving as President whenever Eisenhower shall certify that he has recovered.

That if the President should not be aware of his disability, that decision shall be made by the vice president with the advice of a majority of the Cabinet.

This is good news because it means Eisenhower has dissolved the haunting anxiety that some time during the next three years we might have a repetition of the terrible vacuum in the functioning of the presidency as we had during the Garfield and Wilson administrations. It can't happen now.

The need remains for a Constitutional amendment.

One reason is that historically there has been great dispute over whether the vice president, in the event of presidential disability, took over the office as well as the duties of the office and thereby succeeded to the presidency.

In the only two serious cases of presidential disability to date—in the Garfield and Wilson administrations—Vice President Arthur and Vice President Marshall were not called to act as president because of the fear that the vice president would actually become president and thereby supersede the disabled president for the remainder of the term.

This needs to be cleared up unequivocally.

The second reason a Constitutional amendment is needed is that there is no orderly procedure for determining presidential disability when the President is unable or unwilling to acknowledge his disability.

Rockefeller Sniffs The Political Wind

ALBANY, N.Y.—A Harriman versus a Rockefeller—that is the prospect in the contest for governor of New York this fall. Gov. Averell Harriman, a Democrat, is running for re-election and the most likely Republican opponent at the moment is Nelson Rockefeller. One of the five grandsons of old John D. Nelson has become more deeply involved in public life than any of his brothers.

He has smelled the smoke of political battle and if the professional politicians who run the Republican Party give him even a grudging encouragement, he seems likely to enter the race.

The Harriman fortune was built on railroads, the Rockefeller's on oil. In the recent Fortune magazine appraisal of American wealth, each man was listed with a net worth of 100 million dollars. This is, of course, only a guess, since no balance sheets were available and with that kind of money even the individual himself would find it hard to reach an exact figure.

On Harriman's side, no doubts exist. He is rarin' to go, determined to win re-election by a big majority. With a large majority, giving him a stronger grip on the Democratic organization in New York, he would be a figure to

A bit of progress has been made in Mississippi where the State Senate, by a vote of 35 to 11, passed a bill that would allow women to serve on juries. The bill has yet to pass the House.

It is to be hoped that it does, for the distasteful side in the jury boxes of the nation has long been a success. Alabama and North Carolina, the only other states which do not permit women to serve, should lose no time in preparing to join in the procession.

Tennessee Parking Meter Halts Flight Of Runaway Heir, 17, and His Girl Friend

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., March 3 (AP) — A Michigan industrialist's runaway son and his girl friend were stopped short of their Florida destination today because they did not have a coin for a parking meter.

The youth and girl, both 17, were identified by police as Donald T. Hughes Jr. of Grosse Pointe Park, Mich., and Julie Van Gallow of Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich.

To prove the unfaltering durability of Chevrolet's radical new Turbo-Thrust V8,* the tremendous flexibility of the new Turboglide transmission,* the incredible smoothness of Full Coil suspension,* we tackled the most challenging transcontinental road in the world — the 1,000-mile General San Martin-Highway. To make the test harder, officials of the Automobile Club of Argentina sealed the hood shut at Buenos Aires — no chance to add oil or water, no chance to adjust carburetors for high altitude. Tough rules — so tough that these A.C.A. experts asserted the run could not be made. But Chevrolet insisted; the '58 station wagon had to prove that it was absolutely, unerringly reliable!

So the run began — across the blazing Argentine pampas, twisting into the foothills, thrusting boldly into the stone ramparts of the forbidding Andes. Up and up the thread of a road climbed, over tumbled rock, skirting cliffs, almost 2½ miles in the sky! Drivers gasped for oxygen at 12,572 feet — but the Turbo-Thrust V8 never slackened its jet-smooth torrent of power, the Full Coil springs smothered every bump, the Turboglide transmission made play of fantastic grades up to 30 percent. Then a spine-chilling plunge to the Pacific at Chile's great port of Valparaiso, a quick turn-around and back again, over the most stupendous mountain range in our hemisphere. Total time for the round trip: 41 hours 14 minutes — and the engine was never turned off! That's rugged proof-in-action of the great new advances in ride, power, handling and comfort that you'll test for yourself the first time you drive a '58 Chevrolet. That's a real thrill — why not discover it this week?

Threat to Archbishop Admitted by Suspect

BOSTON, March 3 (U)—Police today arrested a man they said admitted making telephone calls threatening the life of Catholic Archbishop Richard J. Cushing of Boston.

Police identified the man as John Pohl, 51, a shoe worker from South Boston. He was hooked on suspicion of making threatening phone calls.

He was picked up at work after police received an anonymous telephone tip.

Officers said Pohl admitted making the calls early Sunday to police headquarters in which he threatened the life of the archbishop and also said he would blow up the Holy Cross Cathedral.

105,000 In ILGWU Call Strike

NEW YORK, March 3 (U)—The International Ladies Garment Workers Union tonight set 10 a.m. Wednesday for the start of a strike of 105,000 dress workers in seven northeastern states.

City Labor Commissioner Harold A. Felix met separately during the day with the ILGWU and employer representatives, and reported neither side was budging from its deadlocked position in the contract dispute.

The strike will mark the first major walkout in 25 years of collective bargaining in the garment industry. It will affect only the dressmaking segment of the industry.

ILGWU leaders told the dress makers to report for work as usual 9 a.m. Wednesday, leave their jobs at 10 a.m. and march to Madison Square Garden for a mass meeting.

Earlier, ILGWU President David Dubinsky said he thought the strike would be short because of the pressure of the coming Easter season, one of the industry's busiest times.

Contract negotiations came to a halt Saturday, with the union demanding a 15 per cent wage increase, a 35-hour week for piece workers and other improvements. Representatives of five employer groups offered a 5 per cent increase and fringe benefits and said they could afford no more.

The present average wage for garment workers is $2.10 an hour.

"We can afford to strike as long as it is necessary," Dubinsky said.

Atom Plane Rush Plan Is Rejected

'Flying Reactor' Delayed a Year

By JOHN W. FINNEY
(Copyright 1958, The New York Times Co.)
WASHINGTON, March 3—The administration has rejected an Air Force proposal to accelerate development of the first atomic-powered airplane. As a result, the flight of this nation's first nuclear airplane will be delayed by at least a year, and probably more.

Behind the administration's decision was the feeling that it was not of paramount importance psychologically that the United States beat the Soviet Union to flying the first atomic-powered airplane.

The Air Force's "fly early" proposal, presented after the first Soviet satellite was launched last October, was based on the conviction that the United States should attempt to be first in development of an atomic-powered airplane.

IN EXISTING PLANE
The Air Force's proposal called for placing an atomic reactor and turbo-jet engine, now under development, in an existing airframe, rather than waiting for construction of a specially designed fuselage. Among the airplanes which were proposed for modification were the B52 intercontinental jet bomber and the KC135 jet tanker.

By this approach, the Air Force hoped to have an atomic airplane flying by 1960 in a technical demonstration of the feasibility of nuclear flight.

After months of consideration, the administration has decided to continue with development of an airplane especially designed for nuclear power. It is estimated that this plane will be flying before 1961 to 1963.

The administration reasoned, according to informed sources, that development should proceed with an atomic airplane which would be a militarily useful weapon, rather than diverting effort and money into what would be essentially "a flying reactor."

1961 OR 1963
Instead of the "fly early" proposal, the administration has decided to continue with development of an airplane especially designed for nuclear power. It is estimated that this plane will be flying before 1961 to 1963.

The court's dismissal of the suit was the highlight of an unusually heavy decision day following its month-long recess. In other major actions, the court:

- Upheld 7-2 the right of a state to levy taxes on a user of tax exempt property, including plants owned by the U.S. government, when used by a private party for business purposes.
- Fixed Oct. 13 as the day for on un-American Activities.

In the suit, the actors and writers accused a large number of producers of conspiring with two committee members, Reps. Clyde Doyle, D-Calif., and Donald L. Jackson, R-Calif., and committee investigator William Wheeler to keep them from movie jobs.

The court's dismissal of the suit was the highlight of an unusually heavy decision day following its month-long recess. In other major actions, the court:

WASHINGTON, March 3 (U)—The Supreme Court today dismissed a 50-million dollar suit by 23 Hollywood actors and writers who accused movie producers and House Communist investigators of "blacklisting" them from the industry.

In a brief order, the court held that it never should have accepted the case for review because the dismissal of the suit by California state courts "rests on an adequate state ground." Justice William O. Douglas dissented.

THE HELD GIRL—START OF THE FLAPPER LINE
Thirty Years Later—and She's Back With Us

Held Lived To See His Flapper Return

By DOROTHY ROE

NEW YORK, March 3 (U)—John Held Jr., cartoonist of the jazz age, lived just long enough to see his famous Held Girl, the ultimate flapper, come back in style.

The Held Girl set the fashions of the 1920s just as the Gibson Girl did a generation before. But Held's cartoon flapper was far different from the earlier American beauty created by Charles Dana Gibson. She was flat-chested, long-legged, hip-belted and slinky. She smoked cigarettes in a foot-long holder, rolled her stockings and wore her skirts above her knees.

It took 30 years for the flapper fashions to return. But before his death Sunday at his home in Belmar, N.J., John Held Jr. saw "Margie" come back in the latest styles from Paris and New York.

Girls of 1958 are wearing hip-belted chemise dresses and skirts barely to the knees. The flapper haircut is the latest thing, as is the jewelry of the Twenties—rope necklaces and long, dangling earrings.

They've even revived the old songs and dances. At any college prom you'll see girls in knee skirts doing the Charleston, while the orchestra plays "Yes Sir, That's My Baby!"

Held once said he didn't know whether he created the flapper or merely chronicled her. His best guess was that he drew a composite figure representing the spirit and fashions of the times, and the girls copied her.

STOPPED BY POLICE BULLETS

5 Boys Seize Girl, 15, From Detention Home

LANDER, Wyo., March 3 (U)—A highway patrolman put a bullet through the tire of an automobile today and stopped the flight of five teen-age boys believed to have taken a girl from a detention home in Salt Lake City at gun point.

The six were jailed here. Sheriff C. A. McDougall said they refused to talk and at first refused to identify themselves. He later identified them as Mike Bishop, Kenneth Hulse, Phillip Maze, and Duane Thompson, all about 16, Leroy Wiseman, 17, and Janice Jones, 15.

GIRL FOUGHT POLICE

He said Bishop was a former Lander resident, and quoted Bishop as saying the Jones girl went with them willingly.

The sheriff said of the girl: "She was glad to be with them." He said the girl fought him when he refused to let her ride from the scene of the capture to the jail with "her boy friend."

Sheriff's officers said once in jail, the youths began throwing things out of their cells, beating on the walls, shouting at each other and refusing to answer questions.

IN SOLITARY

The girl, clad in denim pedal pushers and a jacket, was placed in solitary confinement. Sheriff's officers said she refused to talk.

In Salt Lake City, Claude Dean, of the Salt Lake County Detention home, said he recognized Bishop as one of three youths who forced their way into the home last night, broke down a door and carried off the Jones girl. One of the trio carried a pistol and another wore brass knuckles.

Asst. Police Chief L. R. Green of Salt Lake City said discussions were under way to determine how the youths would be prosecuted.

Highway patrolman H. D. Harris put a bullet through the left rear tire of the auto after the youths had run a road block near Shoshoni, Wyo., 47 miles north of here — about 360 miles from Salt Lake City.

Sheriff McDougall said the group surrendered without trouble. A .22 caliber pistol was found in the car.

Thieves Steal Safe, Unlocked and Empty

WATERTOWN, N. Y., March 3 (U)—Police hunted today for a band of rather stupid safe burglars which broke into C. J. Ferguson's service station during the weekend and stole an unlocked safe. They later dumped the safe after they apparently locked it accidentally and couldn't force it open.

Ferguson said the safe was empty.

Along with me, my family has suffered, as have my good friends, including those whose kindnesses to me drew them into this investigation.

IN QUESTION

However, I have too deep a consciousness of the responsibilities of public office to be unmindful of the public interest. Despite my personal convictions, my usefulness as a member of the Federal Communications Commission has been brought into question—and my hopes and aspirations as well as those of my family and friends, must be subservient to the more vital consideration of public interest. Therefore, I hereby submit my resignation as a member of the commission to take effect at your pleasure. In doing so voluntarily, I wish to restate my gratitude to you and to my friends who have stood by me during this trying ordeal.

Text of Eisenhower's reply:
I have your letter of March 3, in which you submit your resignation as a member of the Federal Communications Commission to take effect at my pleasure. Without attempting to pass judgment upon the questions you have raised in your letter, I nevertheless, agree with you that your usefulness as a member of the commission is so seriously impaired that you are wise to tender your resignation.

Therefore, I believe that I have no alternative except to accept it effective at the close of business today.

Tension Here Indefinitely, Says Bryan

Americans can look forward to international "tension and danger" for an indefinite time, Wright Bryan, editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, told Atlanta Rotarians Monday.

The former editor of the Atlanta Journal recalled he predicted such a period of tension on his return to the States following service as war correspondent in World War II.

"Today, more than 10 years later, I see nothing to make me change my mind," he declared.

The only difference, he said, is that the "margin of error has become less."

Bryan cited recent Soviet advances in the field of atomic and ballistic missiles to back his thesis that "we can't make the mistakes in '58 that we could in '45."

Referring to Georgia, for many years his home, the editor said he was particularly struck by the growth of the state's economy and "the movement toward a better balance between industry and agriculture."

He was introduced by Jack Tarter, president of Atlanta Newspapers, Inc. Atlanta Constitution publisher Clark Howell, Rotary president, presided.

Scout Show Leaders

Named by Chairman

Atlanta Scouting Exposition committee chairmen have been named by general chairman Lamar Swift, it was announced Monday.

They are J. A. Giglio, participation; Joe E. Brown, ticket; M. H. Musser, activities; Charles Trainor, programs; W. M. Wolf, prizes, and Mark Bollman, publicity.

The exposition is scheduled for April 26, 28-29, at the municipal auditorium.

36,000 Self-Help Certificates Given To Georgians by Red Cross in '57

The Red Cross issued self-help training certificates in safety and health to more than 36,000 Georgians in 160 local chapters during 1957 and gave welfare assistance in all counties to members of the armed forces, war veterans and their families.

An annual report by the organization, presented Monday to Gov. Griffin, also revealed that patients in Georgia hospitals were provided, at no cost to them, Red Cross blood and derivatives commercially valued at $1,601,444 during the fiscal year ended last June 30.

Donors gave 65,656 pints of blood during bloodmobile visits to 58 counties of the state within range of regional blood centers in Atlanta, Savannah and also in Columbia, S.C. The report was presented by James V. Carmichael of Marietta, 1958 national fund vice chairman for Georgia.

FCC's Mack Resigns; Ike Calls Action Wise

cept to accept it effective at the close of business today.

Most members of the investigating subcommittee had called for Mack to resign in the "best interests" of the agency he had served for two years.

Earlier today, Rep. Harris (D-Ark) and subcommittee chairman, made his previous resignation demands stronger by announcing he planned an impeachment resolution against the commissioner.

Harris made his announcement in the angry aftermath of an implication by George T. Baker, president of National Airlines, that the subcommittee was "crucifying" Mack, while letting several senators who had played roles in the disputed Miami case escape. At the witness table, Baker listed seven senators and one House member who he said had approached members of the FCC in behalf of a losing opponent, A. Frank Katzentine, Miami radio station operator.

Harris explained later that under congressional rules a House committee could not "require" U. S. senators to appear before it. However, he said he would give any of the senators a chance to be heard if they wished. Several of them said they would welcome an "invitation."

Senators named by Baker as having tried to influence the FCC to vote to award Channel 10 to Katzentine included these Democrats: Holland and Smathers of Florida, Kefauver of Tennessee, Monroney of Oklahoma and Magnuson of Washington; also these Republicans: Schoepel of Kansas and Payne of Maine.

Baker also said that while the Miami case was awaiting final action, Rep. Celler (D-NY) had declared his opposition to National Airlines' application, on the ground that an airline should not have a television station.

He said Mack was a victim of his friends—"the tool used by selfish interests for personal gain through an instrument of the U. S. Government."

Harris also called on Mack to "reveal all the facts and tell all he knows about those who got him in this situation regardless of who it involves." Mack is scheduled to return before the House subcommittee Wednesday.

The White House was involved in these other developments in the agency investigation today:

1. Harmer D. Denny, member of the Civil Aeronautics Board, denied in a letter to Harris that Sherman Adams, assistant to the President, had ever talked with him about the North American Airlines case in 1953 while a decision was pending.

The subcommittee is pursuing a broad study of all major regulatory agencies, including the FCC and the CAB.

2. Baker told the subcommittee that he understood Generalissimo Trujillo of the Dominican Republic was "putting up the money" to finance a shipyard in which Col. George Gordon Moore was reported to hold an interest. Col. Moore is a brother-in-law of Mrs. Eisenhower and a friend of Baker.

Reds Accept Pre-Summit Conference made clear, was the matter of German reunification. That, he said, was the business of the Germans themselves.

The position of the Western powers has been that before a summit meeting were held, there should be reasonable assurance that such a gathering would be able to produce positive results, that it would not disappoint the hopes of the world. The U. S. and other countries, including France, suggested that the foreign ministers of East and West could work out preliminary arrangements that might pave the way for success.

MOSCOW STRATEGY

At first, the Soviet Union rejected that idea. The Kremlin leaders, including Communist party chief Nikita Khrushchev, said that certain Western foreign ministers who, Moscow alleged, were opposed to a summit gathering could use the foreign ministers meeting to raise insurmountable obstacles to a gathering of government leaders.

Now, suddenly, Moscow has accepted a foreign ministers conference but only after Western leaders, including Secretary of State Dulles, had agreed such a meeting would not be necessary. Yet the Soviet acceptance was couched in terms that made it apparent the proposed meeting would have no real power.

Thus, the Soviet Union appeared, through its note to Pineau and in a similar memorandum to the American government delivered in the last week, appeared to be making a concession. Western diplomats recognized it as no such thing. And in return for its "concession," Moscow was asking the West to accept in advance a commitment to attend a summit conference.

ASK DELEGATES

Moscow suggested that a foreign ministers' meeting should include representatives of the U. S., Britain, France and Italy for the West, the Soviet Union, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Rumania for the Communist world, plus an unlisted number of delegates from countries committed to neither East nor West.

Gromyko said that a gathering of foreign ministers could be held while diplomatic negotiations were being carried out through normal channels.

them and they are afraid not to buy ads," Harris wrote. "Two or three of my clients called me when the pitch was made to them. I advised them to take some ads in his paper and take just as little as they could."

"Now, when the chairman of the Highway Board sends these high-pressure salesmen out with this kind of pitch to the people whose business is dependent upon him, they dare not turn him down," Harris said.

"This kind of pitch and this kind of scheme is almost as bad as high jacking," he added.

Chalker was not in his office at the Capitol Monday and could not be reached immediately for comment on Harris' disclosures.

Chalker's paper, which began publication shortly after he became Highway Board chairman, figured in a Senate investigation during the past session of the Legislature.

by Negro children in Prince Edward for a time limit before which the school board must begin ending segregation.

"It is inconceivable," Judge Hutcheson wrote, "that any of the litigants or other persons affected would willingly see the public school system abolished. It is imperative that additional time be allowed."

Judge Hutcheson was reversed by the U. S. Court of Appeals for the fourth circuit. Its unsigned opinion said:

"The fact that the schools might be closed if the order were enforced is no reason for not enforcing it. A person may not be denied enforcement of rights to which he is entitled under the constitution of the United States because of action taken or threatened in defiance of such rights."

In a petition for Supreme Court review, Virginia said the appellate court order in effect "eliminates the discretion" given the district courts in segregation cases.

"It is important that this court now reestablish that area of discretion," the petition said. "Otherwise in large areas of Virginia and perhaps in other states, public schools are now in their last session."

The case will now go back to Judge Hutcheson. Under the mandate of the court of appeals, he will have to order the school board of Prince Edward to make a start on integration by a specific date, or at least come in with a plan by some date.

Ike, Nixon Reveal Plan On Disability

law or constitutional amendment would be preferable. Only House Speaker Rayburn was on record as saying the plan was not possible within the constitution.

The plan was applauded by Rep. Celler (4-NY), chairman of the House Judiciary Subcommittee that has been studying the question. But Celler continued to insist that a simple act of Congress, not a constitutional amendment as requested by the administration, would formalize the situation in the future.

Public concern with the disability question took a sudden spurt last week when the President disclosed that he and the Vice President had an understanding on the matter. The President hinted at the existence of a written agreement.

Hagerly said today's statement was issued to avoid "any mystery" about the matter.

The administration's request for a constitutional amendment on the disability question has been bogged down in Congress.

Under the administration proposal, the procedure would be much the same as in today's announcement, except that the Vice President, if he were required to make the determination of disability, would have to get the written approval of a majority of the Cabinet. Also, the Vice President, with the approval of a majority of the Cabinet, would have the right to dispute a President's declaration of his ability to resume the office and could demand action by Congress on the question.

Docks Issue Is Closed, Griffin Says

not favor buying the Whitehall property by condemnation.

Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook, third member of the committee, was out of his office Monday. Actions of the acquisition group must be by unanimous vote.

Members of the Ports Authority, meeting Monday in Brunswick, seemed surprised by Griffin's statement that the Savannah deal is "wound up" as far as he is concerned.

But they indicated they will pin their hopes on Thrasher's statement that he will not close the door on buying the Whitehall plantation.

Chairman Robert Frankfield of Savannah said the authority "was not prepared for such a statement" as the governor made at his press conference. Otherwise, members of the authority made no direct comment on the statement.

The authority met in Brunswick to discuss with city and Glynn County officials the possible acceptance of a site for development of a state port there.

No action was taken. The proposed site for the port would be purchased for $500,000 in bond funds.

Liquor Store Operator Pistol-Whipped, Robbed

BEATEN BY ROBBER
J. A. Whitehead

A husky youth in blue jeans and a sports shirt pistol-whipped a Ponce de Leon liquor store owner late Monday and robbed him of approximately $150, police said.

J. A. Whitehead, 59, of Roswell, operator of a store at 271 Ponce de Leon Ave., NE, was treated at Crawford W. Long Hospital for head injuries inflicted by the bandit, detectives J. H. Barnes and N. W. Flanagan said.

Detectives said they were told the youngster entered, produced a pistol and said:

"Stand where you are. I don't want to kill you, but I will."

The bandit inspected a back room and instructed Whitehead to take the money from the cash register and bring it there, detectives said. After the store owner delivered the money, officers said, he was told to turn around.

The bandit struck Whitehead several blows on the head with a pistol. Whitehead said he collapsed over a stack of liquor cases and feigned unconsciousness. The gunman fled.

Mrs. Burnett Is Teacher of '58 in DeKalb

Mrs. Lucille Burnett was named Monday night as DeKalb County Teacher of the Year.

The board of directors of the DeKalb Chamber of Commerce accepted a report of its education committee naming Mrs. Burnett for the honor as the group met at the H. W. Lay Co. plant in Chamblee.

Mrs. Burnett is a science teacher at Chamblee High School. She has taught there for 10 years, and has 15 years' experience as a teacher.

The education committee scheduled a "Dutch dinner" for chamber membership for March 13 at 7 p.m. at the American Legion Club in Avondale Estates. Dr. Edwin Harrison, president of Georgia Tech, will speak.

Board member James A. Mackay, a state representative, congratulated the chamber on its actions in support of state purchase of Stone Mountain.

Mackay said that stiff problems lie ahead in developing the mountain, and said it will be "quite a feat" for the state to obtain clear title to the mountain and park area.

One chamber member asked Board Member Claude H. Blount, chairman of the DeKalb County commission, whether the county has agreed to donate its land in front of the mountain to the state.

Blount termed this a "false report," but said the county will cooperate in a way that will be acceptable.

Florida Youths Sentenced in Holdup Here

The remaining two unsentenced youths in a group of four charged with two liquor store robberies were given prison terms Monday in Fulton Superior Court.

Judge E. E. Andrews, after the two pleaded guilty to robbery charges, ordered them to serve four to 10 years in prison on the first charge and 20-year suspended sentences on the second charge.

The two, John William Harness, 20, and Willis Harold Wills, 21, both of Avon Park, Fla., were charged, along with two other youths, with holding up liquor stores on Jan. 21 and 23.

The two other youths, Haywood Ellis Yarbrough, 21, and William David Harden, 31, were sentenced in February to the same length prison terms as were Harness and Wills.

Arresting officers said two of the youths carried in their wallets clippings of an Atlanta Constitution news story with the heading, "Youths Rob 2 Whisky Stores in Rapid Fire."

Youth, 17, Wounded Cleaning Rifle Here

A 17-year-old high school student was injured seriously Monday when shot accidentally by a .22-caliber rifle he was cleaning, police said.

The youth, Douglas Baker, of 795 Ponders Ave., NW, was admitted to Crawford W. Long Hospital with a gunshot wound in the abdomen, detectives M. W. Blackwell and W. S. Acree said. His condition was given as "fair."

Detectives said they were told the youth began cleaning the rifle earlier in the afternoon and went to play in a basketball game. They said he was working on the gun again and it accidentally fired.

East Point Votes New Fund To Extend Water Mains

By DON BAIRD

East Point will continue its policy of extending water mains free, rather than assessing contractors.

City Council Monday night voted to tap the $52,000 contingency fund for an extra $10,000 for laying new mains, in addition to $30,000 already earmarked in the contingency fund for that purpose. Numerous contractors had protested the proposed action that would cost the contractors $1.50 per foot for the mains.

McIntosh Sheriff Hit With an $18,000 Suit

The McIntosh County commissioners Monday sued Sheriff Thomas H. Poppell for $18,000.

The action, filed in Darien, was a development in the months-long controversy over 102 acres of land at Harris Neck leased by the sheriff from the county for $10 a year.

The commissioners have declared the lease, granted by a previous commission, invalid. Today's action was in the form of a cross-bill in reply to a suit by the sheriff to restrain the commissioners from interfering with his lease.

The cross-bill charges Poppell with "wilful acts of depredation and waste" on the land, including removal of a $7,000 house, removal of a $1,000 house, and removal of plumbing and fixtures from a third house.

Foster Loses Death Plea to High Court

WASHINGTON, March 3 (UP)—The Supreme Court today denied a hearing to James Fulton Foster, who is under death sentence in Georgia for the robbery-slaying of Charles H. Drake Sr., of Jefferson, Ga.

Drake was shot the night of June 19, 1956. Foster, a painter, had been released from a Florida Penitentiary shortly before the killing. The Georgia Supreme Court upheld Foster's conviction on Oct. 11, 1957.

Foster's appeal to the high tribunal said he was denied due process of law by the state's refusal to allow him a continuance to prepare for trial.

Mrs. Drake was beaten while attempting to telephone for help during the robbery attempt. She identified Foster as the killer of her 60-year-old merchant husband.

Sparkman Honored by Optometrists

The Southeast Congress of Optometry's 1958 Award of Merit for public service was presented to Sen. Sparkman (D-Ala) Monday night.

John Horne of Washington, D.C., Sparkman's executive secretary, accepted a plaque in the senator's behalf at a banquet attended by 300 optometrists and their wives at the Biltmore Hotel.

Sparkman's Senate schedule prevented him from accepting the award in person, Horne explained. Dr. William C. Ezell of Spartanburg, S. C., received a plaque honoring him as "the most outstanding optometrist of 1958 in the South."

Featured speaker was Leo Aikman, columnist for The Atlanta Constitution.

The optometrists also heard Horne warn that the shortage of optometric practitioners is resulting in inadequate eye care, especially in rural sections.

The concluding session of the congress Tuesday will feature lectures by Dr. O. J. Melvin of New Orleans and the election of new officers.

Tipster, 9, Is Thief, Too, Says 11-Year-Old Suspect

A 9-year-old tipster led police to a suspect—but when police concluded their investigation Monday they had two suspects instead of one.

Patrolmen J. D. Puckett and S. B. Powell said it happened this way:

They located a 9-year-old who said he could point out where a stolen bicycle was hidden. He accompanied officers to an address on Hutchison street, NE, and pointed it out.

And could he point out the youth who stole it?

He could. He accompanied officers to another address in northeast Atlanta and pointed out the home on an 11-year-old. Officers took the 11-year-old in tow and recovered a second bicycle.

Then the 11-year-old accused the informer of having stolen one of the bicycles. The 9-year-old admitted it, officers said.

Both were turned over to juvenile authorities. (Names of accused persons under 17 years of age are withheld in accordance with the Georgia Juvenile Court Law.)

LIVE BETTER FOR LESS

Church Aid Is Sought In Unit System Fight

Fulton County Rep. M. M. (Muggsy) Smith and DeKalb Rep. James Mackay Monday blasted the county unit system before two groups of churchmen.

Mackay told the Atlanta Christian Council, "The candidates in this fall's gubernatorial race won't come to the big cities except to use the radio, TV and mass communication facilities. Our votes don't count."

"If the county unit system is the goose that lays the golden eggs, it has quit laying and we'd better take it to a veterinarian."

"Until all Georgia is put on a fair representation basis, we're going to have shenanigans in state government."

"If you don't have equality at the ballot box, you won't have equality in distribution of funds."

Smith, speaking to a group of Presbyterian ministers, said the eight largest counties in the state have 42 per cent of the population but less than 12 per cent of the vote.

Both representatives called for the churchmen to exert a new interest in the state's politics.

Jet Port for Peiping

HONG KONG, March 3 (UP)—Radio Peiping reports an airport capable of handling jet airliners opened service in Peiping at the weekend. It is the third airport of Red China's capital.

City Okays $700,000 In Building Permits

Permits for construction valued at more than $700,000 were issued by City Building Inspector William R. Wofford Monday.

Largest single permit was for the $380,000 Downtown Motel at West Peachtree St., NW. L. B. Posey Jr., Co., obtained a permit to erect the $260,174 Johnson elementary school at 970 Martin St., Southeast.

41 on Plane Safe After Engine Flames

LONDON, March 3 (UP)—An airliner carrying 41 passengers on a flight from South Africa landed safely at London Airport last night with one engine afire.

Six fire engines and crash tenders stood by while the plane landed. The blaze was extinguished quickly and no one was injured.

North Georgia Woodmen To Convene Here March 16

A convention of the North Georgia District of the Supreme Woodmen Circle will be held here March 16 at the Woodmen Circle Club, State and 14th streets, NE, according to Mrs. Elizabeth McWaters, Cedartown, state manager.

Participating will be the Dora Alexander Talley drill team, Atlanta, headed by Miss Myrtle Hardy.

Other officers planning to attend are Mrs. Clara B. Cassidy, past national president; Miss Myrtle Stephenson, national alternate representative; Mrs. Estelle Maddux, state president; Mrs. Louise Baumgras, state treasurer; Mrs. Emma Brooks, past state president, all of Atlanta.

Need Passports

AMMAN, March 3 (UP)—Jordanians and Syrians will have to get passports to cross their common frontier. A decree by King Hussein cancelled the identity card system in use since July 1, 1956.

Curtail Operations

PORTLAND, Ore., March 3 (UP)—About 30 small Northwest plywood mills today announced either immediate shutdowns or reductions in production because of the sharp drop in plywood prices. The big companies said they were not planning similar curtailments.

Kroger folks offer that personal touch—even to our guarantee!

In any Kroger store, every cashier is a favorite of certain customers. They even stand in line for her smile, her greeting—and to let her check their groceries.

So many customers vote Rosa Lee South as their favorite that it's easy to see she just plain likes people—so people like her. In her 10 years with Kroger, Rosa Lee has always followed this principle: "Treat customers just like friends. And pretty soon, they are friends."

At Buckhead store where Rosa Lee works—at all Kroger stores—that's the way all of us try to look at our customers. We figure you like a store where you're treated as a friend—a personal friend.

Why, even our special Kroger guarantee has its personal side. Every Kroger store manager gives his personal word guarantee on everything you buy. That's why thousands know they live better for less when they shop at

Ports Official Gardner Named Acting Director

SEA ISLAND, March 3 (AP)—The State Ports Authority today named Sam Gardner as acting director.

Gardner, who has been assistant director and comptroller for three years, will fill in for D. Leon Williams, who gave up the $12,000-a-year job for a similar position in North Carolina at $18,000. Gardner will continue to receive his present $9,000-a-year pay.

The authority huddled for four hours and again reiterated that the proposed Central of Georgia docks property purchase at Savannah is a good deal. It has agreed to pay $3,750,000 for the Central of Georgia docks and nearly 400 acres of adjacent waterfront property.

But Robert Frankfield, chairman, said the authority took no further action on the purchase pending receiving a formal report by its engineers.

The authority during the afternoon met with Brunswick and Glynn County officials concerning the establishment of a state port here.

Frankfield said nothing firm is yet in the works in this direction, although Gov. Marvin Griffin has been quoted as ready to supply funds for a $2,000,000 installation.

All members of the authority were present for the closed-door session.

'Home Rule' Will Stay, McWhorter Pledges

By HERMAN HANCOCK

DeKalb Rep. Hugh McWhorter told Atlanta aldermen Monday they will have home rule as long as he remains a member of the Georgia Legislature.

The veteran DeKalb representative spoke at a regular aldermanic board session after he asked the privilege of the floor. He said he had cautioned the Fulton delegation against attempting to transfer the power to legislate for Atlanta to the Legislature and ended his address by saying, "I will see that the legislation for Atlanta takes place in this group and not in the halls of the Georgia Legislature as long as I remain a representative from DeKalb County."

DEFENDS RAISE BLOCK

The DeKalb delegation blocked some $140,000 in police salary raises after the Fulton delegation agreed to approve them. The issue was extremely controversial with Mayor Hartsfield and administration leaders contending the city did not have the money to raise police or other salaries.

"I promised to vote the police holidays," McWhorter said, "but after the Senate got that and amended it, I blocked it. My two colleagues were out of town so I took the brunt for blocking the raise, and asked to appear here to tell you exactly what happened. I am proud that some 50,000 of our DeKalb County citizens live in Atlanta and that you are a suburb of DeKalb County."

Aldermen passed a resolution praising the DeKalb delegation and approved an ordinance requiring that all future proposals to amend the Atlanta charter be submitted to members of the aldermanic board.

Led by Alderman Lee Evans, president of the board of aldermen, several, including Aldermen Ed A. Gilliam, Lee Field, Jesse Draper, John A. White and James E. Jackson praised McWhorter and the DeKalb delegation.

OTHER ACTIONS

Aldermen also:

1. Elected Miss Julia Elliott, secretary to Municipal Revenue Collector Riley Elder, as the non-school employee representative on the general employees pension board, to succeed City Construction Chief Ray Nixon. Since his elevation, Nixon is no longer able to serve in that capacity.

2. Approved a proposed contract under which Fulton County will pay the city $183,669 for 1958 for police protection in unincorporated areas of the county.

3. Heard Ald. Lee Field, chairman of the aldermanic board's prison farm committee, report that DeKalb County grand jury recommendations for improving conditions at the city's farm are in line with plans already under way there. He said the recommendations were based on recommendations which prison officials had made.

5 Escape Road Crew, Flee State

Five long-term convicts escaped Monday from a road repair crew working in Quitman County. The State Board of Corrections said. They were believed to have fled across the Chattahoochee River into Alabama.

The escapes, all from the Lee County Prison Branch, were identified as:

Harold Griggs, 35, serving a life sentence for murder from Early County; Walter R. Smith, 26, serving 15 years on burglary charges from Clay, Muscogee and Peach Counties; Jimmy Hall, 22, serving 5-8 years for burglary from Clay and Muscogee Counties; Emory Alvin Goodwin, 30, of Abbeville, serving a life sentence for robbery, and Lewis Turner Larmine, serving 20 years on a rape conviction in Cobb County.

J. B. Hatchett said the prisoners, all white, were assigned to the Lee County branch of the state prison and were employed on a road repair project in nearby Quitman County. Hatchett said an investigation of the break was under way.

John Osterman Speech Winner

John Osterman, a member of the Buckhead Toastmasters Club, was announced Monday as the winner of the Atlanta inter-club speech contest.

As I See It

Berle and Gleason On Comeback Trail

By PAUL JONES

Television comedy may be passe now—but you can look for a comeback by some of the great comedians next season.

I think the showing Milton Berle made in a recent Television Theater drama is going to give the networks enough courage to try some comedy programming again. It would not surprise me if Berle came back with his own show and if Jackie Gleason and some of the others were put back on a 12 or 15 show schedule.

Berle's Trendex might have been a surprise to all of the people in network television and especially to the Madison Avenue agency people. I have always been a big Berle fan, and I had all the confidence in the world that he would make a good showing, even against the formidable Victor Borge show which was on opposite him. He did. Berle pulled down a whopping 23.8 rating which was only a fraction of a percentage point behind Borge.

In television where a rating of 25.5 is considered tops, the figure with which Berle wound up may not seem too sizable. But it becomes mountainous when you learn that it is the biggest rating that the Television Theater has ever had.

Socialist Converts Conservative Hosts

BURNHAM, England, March 3 (UP)—Members of the young Conservatives here have been advised not to invite members of the opposition Socialist Party to their meetings.

The order was issued after a group of young Tories invited a Socialist to their meeting and he converted the group to Socialism.

There is no question who was responsible for that Trendex. The show in which Berle appeared was frightful. But, the comedian managed to get some charitable praise from the critics who liked his performance—but not the show.

This should prove to NBC-TV that Berle's audience is still quite large. And, if CBS-TV needs any proof of Jackie Gleason's popularity it needs only to count the heads of those folks who watch the re-runs of the old Honeymooners sketches which are featured here on Channel 2.

ANOTHER INDICATION of the popularity of the comedy format is the consistent high ratings of the I Love Lucy reruns and the new-wave of the Danny Thomas show, which currently is leading the pack in several of the rating services.

I don't think there ever was any lack of interest in comedy. I think that some of the comedians did work thin the formats for their shows.

If Martin and Lewis should go back together again now, there is no question but that they would regain their hold on the champion of champions status they once dominated.

Everybody likes to laugh. But, they don't want to laugh at the same old jokes over and over again.

Berle's appearance is evidence that the comedians are still welcome in the majority of the TV homes.

HUSBAND AND WIFE teams in show business are legion.

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontaine, Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh, Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy, Bette Davis and Gary Merrill, Charles Laughton and Elsa Lanchester and many others.

Two of those husband-wife actor teams will be on television

"When I come to the part about the collection, use the TV commercial gimmick and turn up the volume!"

Tuesday night, Bette and Gary Merrill will costar in "The Star Maker" on Studio 57 at 10:30 p.m. on Channel 5 and Hume and Jessica will be costarred in "War Against War" on Telephone Time at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 11.

Both shows should be good.

MARY WADE, of Alpharetta, writes: "George K. Marshall rejoices in your fearlessness in puncturing the Arthur Godfrey myth. I am sure there are many, many women viewers, and listeners, who would say Godfrey is no myth—he's for real. To them he is a friend, and his morning program is not the sickening experience Mr. Marshall refers to."

"Maybe Godfrey has some faults. (Who hasn't?) But does Mr. Marshall and the others who run down Mr. Godfrey know of the good that he does? There are many acts of kindness done by Mr. Godfrey that most people will never hear about, because he isn't looking for praise for these deeds."

'Fair-Haired Boy' Dragged Slowly on Familiar Ground

By JACK GOULD

(Copyright 1958 by The New York Times Co.) NEW YORK, March 3—"The Fair-Haired Boy," which was tonight's vehicle on Studio One in Hollywood, was concerned with the struggle for power in the motion picture business. It took a long time to cover the familiar ground.

Harold Raucher's play revolved around two publicity and advertising men; the older of the pair steals the younger's ideas. Ultimately, the senior publicist is trapped when called upon to defend his borrowed opinions. But the trouble was that for much of the 60 minutes Raucher merely kept reiterating his exposition and never got on with his story. The author seems shocked that there is intra-office knifing in the film

FOR THAT "ACHE-ALL-OVER" FEELING OFTEN DUE TO HEAD COLDS

The painful discomforts so frequently caused by head colds yield in a hurry when time-tested, fast-acting "BC" goes to work. "BC" is a special combination of several medically proven pain-relieving ingredients. Each is selected for a specific purpose and all work together to quickly and effectively relieve headaches, neuralgic pains, minor muscular aches and functional periodic pains.

You'll also find that mild, gentle "BC" provides temporary relief for minor arthritic and rheumatic pains and the agony of neuritis and sciatica.

Does Not Upset the Stomach

Laboratory Tests indicate "BC" goes to work fast to get into the blood stream, where pain relief begins.

Bottles Still Popping; Detective Is Baffled

48 hours. Nothing happened while they were away.

But plenty happened after they returned. James M. Herrmann, his wife, Lucille, and the children, Lucille and Jimmy, apparently a close-knit, affectionate family, became the center of a disruptive mystery.

BOTTLES FALL

On Feb. 6 and 7 incidents recurred. One Sunday, the 9th, the father said two bottles slid off a bathroom ledge in paths at right angles to each other, landing at the feet of Jimmy, who was brushing his teeth.

"The poor kid freezes and you can't blame him," said Herrmann.

The same day, a shampoo bottle on Mrs. Herrmann's vanity table did its "usual act"—according to her husband—of popping its top. Herrmann called Nassau County police, and Detective Joseph Tozzi of the Seventh Squad was assigned.

DETECTIVE STUMPED

Yesterday—at his own home nearby, several hours before last night's new developments at the Herrmanns—Detective Tozzi said he was stumped. He has a briefcase full of data. He has consulted "every kind of engineer." He has spent hours with the family and interviewed its members separately; and he has worked closely with a parapsychologist from Duke University.

Detective Tozzi is baffled but not discouraged.

On the evening of Feb. 20, the detective was in the Herrmann living room, completing some notes. Earlier, he had deliberately placed a full sugar bowl near a corner of a table in the adjoining dinette. Jimmy Herrmann was doing homework at the end of the table furthest from the sugar.

BOWL EXPLODES

All at once the bowl "exploded" (as Mrs. Herrmann put it). It landed in the hall and showered grains all over.

Detective Tozzi phoned his chief. He said there was no doubt the incident had occurred and that in his opinion, in view of the time and distance factors involved, no hand had touched the bowl.

Asked about it, Jimmy simply said: "I heard the noise."

Soon after the detective left, an ink bottle on the table popped its screw-top, took off and splattered the hall. At the moment, Mrs. Herrmann was on the phone in the dinette, with Jimmy at her side. Detective Tozzi hurried back.

But the weirdest was to come.

REPORTER ALONE

On the night of the 24th, Dave Kahn, a reporter for Newsday, was alone in the living room. At 9 p.m., he was reading on a chair chosen specifically so that his eyes would be on a direct line with Jimmy's darkened room.

Suddenly a 10-inch geographic globe, ordinarily on top of a metal-red bookcase at the far side of Jimmy's room, hurtled across the hall. It landed in the living room, across from where Kahn sat.

The reporter rushed across the hall and flipped on the light in the boy's room. He was sitting in bed, his legs blanketed. He said he had heard "the noise."

Mr. Kahn wrote that it was "possible but improbable" that the boy had thrown the globe.

STATUETTE FLIES

The next day, a statuette of the Virgin Mary "flew" from a dresser top in the Herrmanns' bedroom across to the dressing table. It knocked down a wedding picture and hit the rim of a shield-shaped mirror.

From the kitchen, Mrs. Herrmann called out at the sound of the crash. She said the children, from their separate rooms, said, "not here, Mommie."

and later that evening, with Jimmy alone in the downstairs play room, doing homework at the far side, a portable phonograph at the other side supposedly left its stand, flew across the room and dented the wood of the open-work stairway guard.

FOCUS ON JIMMY

Obviously, the fact that Jimmy has been alone in the room on several occasions, and nearest to the displaced article on others, has focused attention on the boy.

Detective Tozzi agrees that it would have been possible for the boy to have caused some of the incidents. But he emphasized that it would have been improbable in most instances and impossible in some.

In at least two instances, the boy has been out of the room. Once, when a chest of drawers fell, the family said he was on the stairway to the playroom. And last night, Mrs. Herrmann noted that no one was in the dinette when a heavy glass dish fell.

At 4 p.m. yesterday the whole family and six guests were in the house when the dish fell in the dinette. The last incident, at 10:10, involved a falling night table.

Mrs. Herrmann said she had never heard of a poltergeist. Herrmann said he had, back in his days at Fordham, where he got a law school qualifying certificate.

Down the years, poltergeist manifestations have been associated more with one member of a family than with the others. The one has usually been a teen-ager, more often a girl than a boy. (The Herrmann household, of course, has both.)

Some cases have dissolved when ingenious trickery has been exposed. In others, the "agent" or suspected person has been constantly watched or even tied down—yet the incidents continued.

Many theories have been devised to explain the influence of the "agent." One is that sexual energies, building up in a pubescent individual, are transferred into a kind of vibration that leaves the body like a remote control radio impulse and plays hob where it hits.

Another theory, cited in "Haunted People: Story of the Poltergeist Down the Centuries," by Hereward Cerrington and Nandor Fodor, was advanced in 1944 by Dr. John Layard. He concluded:

"All true poltergeist phenomena . . . are purposeful and probably occasioned by conditions of unresolved tensions in the psyche

WHODUNIT?—WHEELING, W. Va., March 2—"Mugs," a quizzical boxer owned by Henry Orum of the Ace Coin Machine Co., here in Wheeling, gazes through an open window door which was shattered in an early morning explosion of the establishment. The door is located about 12 feet from the point of explosion. Police said that at least three sticks of dynamite were used.

of those involuntarily producing them."

One of the most fantastic details of the Herrmann case, viewed in the light of poltergeist history, is that in at least two instances—the globe, and the tipped holy water bottle—the disturbed article or substance seemed unduly warm to the person who went to right it. (Young Lucille Herrmann said the warmth of the water struck her as she mopped it up with a piece of tissue.)

The Carrington-Fodor book, published in 1951, states on page 13 that "still another peculiarity consists in the fact that the objects thus thrown appear unduly warm, and even hot to the touch."

IN THIS WEEK'S POST

The Stormy Exile of CHARLIE CHAPLIN

He came to the United States and made millions! But he refused to become a citizen of the country that made him rich—abused its laws and moral codes—and openly showed his sympathy for Communist ideas and policies!

Now, in this week's Saturday Evening Post, you'll learn the truth about the little man America once called her most loved clown—and how he has become one of the most unloved human beings of our time!

- You'll find out:
- the little-known facts of why Chaplin has been barred from returning to the U. S.
 - about his wife's secret trip back to this country to pick up his four-million-dollar fortune from a safe-deposit box.
 - why the Queen of England refused to go to the London premiere of his movie "Limelight."
 - about Chaplin's Communist sympathies—and his amazing letter to painter Pablo Picasso.
 - why Chaplin himself says his moral character may have led to his being exiled from the U. S.
 - the facts about his $1,000,000 income-tax debt to the U. S. government.
 - how Chaplin dispensed ill will toward the United States throughout Europe—and how the Swiss caught on to him and now hate him.
 - his private secretary's own nightmarish account of working with the "genius."
 - the real reason his latest picture, "The King in New York," will not be shown here, and it has nothing to do with censorship.

Suspect Slain in Chase Identified as Escapee

A burglary suspect killed Saturday in East Point was identified Monday as Robert Louis Jones, 24, an escaped convict, East Point Police Chief W. H. Tyler said.

Tyler said the slaying ended a six-hour chase in which private citizens joined police in a search for Jones, a Negro. He added it had not been determined whether a private citizen or a policeman fired the bullet which killed Jones.

Jones slugged an East Point officer who had him in custody and escaped, Tyler related. He added East Point officers, aided by police from College Park and Hapeville, took up the chase, using bloodhounds. Armed citizens joined in, Tyler said.

Six hours later Jones was surrounded in a wooded area of East Point and when the group closed in the suspect was felled by a shot.

"It was pitch dark out there," he said. "No one apparently knows who fired the shot."

Tyler said an inquest would be held, but added the time had not been fixed.

Sentenced May 6, 1956, in Fulton County to serve 9-18 years on burglary charges, Jones escaped Oct. 12, 1956, from the Oconee County public works camp, Tyler said. He added Jones was arrested Saturday in East Point and subsequently admitted three burglaries there.

Capt. A. D. Warr and Det. L. D. Shipp had Jones in custody Saturday, driving him around so that he could point out the places he had entered and describe the means of entry, the chief said.

Jones pointed out one place and Warr went inside while Shipp remained with the prisoner. Tyler said the Negro slugged Shipp on the back of the head and as the officer turned to grapple with him struck him in the face, breaking his glasses, and in the mouth.

The Negro ran and Shipp set out after him, Tyler said. Warr returned to the car to find Shipp's hat on the ground beside his broken glasses.

Tyler said Jones, originally of Hogansville, had been in and out of prison for the last eight years. He added at the time of the last arrest Jones gave a fictitious name. The identity was established Monday through fingerprints.

Det. Supt. Glyn Cowan said Atlanta officers also had been searching for Jones in connection with a recent burglary wave.

Woman Told to Pay Wounded Man $1,200

A 41-year-old Negro woman was ordered Monday to pay $1,200 in medical and hospital expenses for a white man who was wounded by a shot she fired at her common-law husband.

The woman, Maggie Mitchell of 252 Brown St., SW, also was placed under two probated concurrent prison sentences of four to eight years and was ordered to pay a $150 fine.

Judge E. E. Andrews, in setting the sentences after the woman pleaded guilty to two charges of assault with intent to murder, ordered that the restitution first be paid J. W. Tallant, 52.

The other assault charge involved shooting at her common-law husband, Taylor Wallace Jr.

According to police, the woman claimed her husband had "been beating on me for two weeks and I got tired of it." She went to the store at 1033 Jefferson St., NW, where both worked and fired at Wallace, but wounded Tallant.

Insurance Committee Calls Cadle

By JACK NELSON

A state official under Insurance Commissioner Zack Cravey and who also is an insurance businessman has been called as a witness before a joint legislative committee.

Deputy Loan Commissioner Ralph Cadle, who serves under Cravey, is expected to be a witness before the committee investigating insurance rates when it holds its first public hearing March 11.

Rep. Frank Twitty, chairman, said the committee hearing will begin at 10 a.m. at the State Capitol.

ATHENS FIRM

Cadle is president of an Athens insurance agency that he formed in 1954 when he was the state's chief insurance investigator. He became deputy loan commissioner in 1955 after the Legislature enacted the Industrial Loan Law.

Cravey said Monday he will have a statement soon about Cadle and John H. Cook, state insurance examiner who also is connected with a private insurance firm. After The Atlanta Constitution disclosed the private insurance interests of Cadle and Cook last week, Cravey said he would ask for a written explanation from both men.

In a letter to Cravey, Twitty asked the insurance commissioner to appear before the committee March 11 along with Cadle and anyone in the insurance department who "might be able to discuss the proposed insurance rates."

Twitty's committee was organized by the Legislature after Cravey approved auto and fire insurance rate increases averaging about 15 per cent. The committee is charged with the responsibility of determining if the increases are justified.

COPY OF PETITION

In the letter, Twitty also asked Cravey to bring to the hearing "a copy of the petition and supporting documents signed by the various insurance companies and the (rating) bureau wherein a request was made for the new schedule of fire and casualty insurance rates."

Twitty assured Cravey and members of his department that they would be "given a most courteous hearing."

At a hearing called on the rate increases last week, Twitty accused Cravey of bringing a "cheering section" with him. The meeting, held in the House chambers at the Capitol, was packed with insurance representatives. The crowd demonstrated noisily several times against Twitty when he engaged in exchanges with Cravey and a representative of the insurance industry.

Training For Nurses Is Topic Here

Nurse examiners from all over the South Monday discussed ways to encourage sounder programs of training for nurses as they met here. The meeting is sponsored by the Southern Regional Education Board.

The examiners are one of three groups taking part in a week-long conference. The others are associate members of the regional nursing program, and representatives of the six universities in the South which offer graduate degrees in nursing under the regional program.

The examiners held a workshop on training programs Monday afternoon. The examiners have the legal responsibility in each state to keep nursing standards high. A standard examination, used all over the U.S., is used to test would-be nurses.

OPENING SESSION

Monday night the regional program's associate members, representing some 35 colleges and universities not offering graduate degrees, held their opening business session.

Theme for all groups in the conference is "interdependence of the health professions for better patient care."

Tuesday nurse examiners will continue meetings and associate members of the regional group will hold a panel discussion on "Clinical Aspects of Basic Collegiate Programs." Miss Helen Pettit of the faculty of Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing in New York, will be moderator.

ALL PARTICIPANTS

Wednesday, all participants in the conference will attend the general opening session and will hear a keynote address by Dr. Leo W. Simmons, professor of sociology at Yale. Dean Florence Hixson, School of Nursing University of Alabama, will preside and Dr. Robert C. Anderson, director of SREB, will deliver the welcoming address.

The rest of Wednesday and Thursday will be devoted to the general regional nursing conference.

Friday the advisory committee on evaluation of the regional nursing project will meet to discuss evaluation activities for the last year of the project.

His Girl Couldn't Say 'No'

By DOROTHY RICKER

Dear Mrs. Ricker:
I am a 17-year-old boy and have been going with a girl who is 15 for over a month. A few nights ago she went to a dance with another boy. She says she did it as a favor to her girl friend, it was all in fun and she couldn't say "no" to the girl.

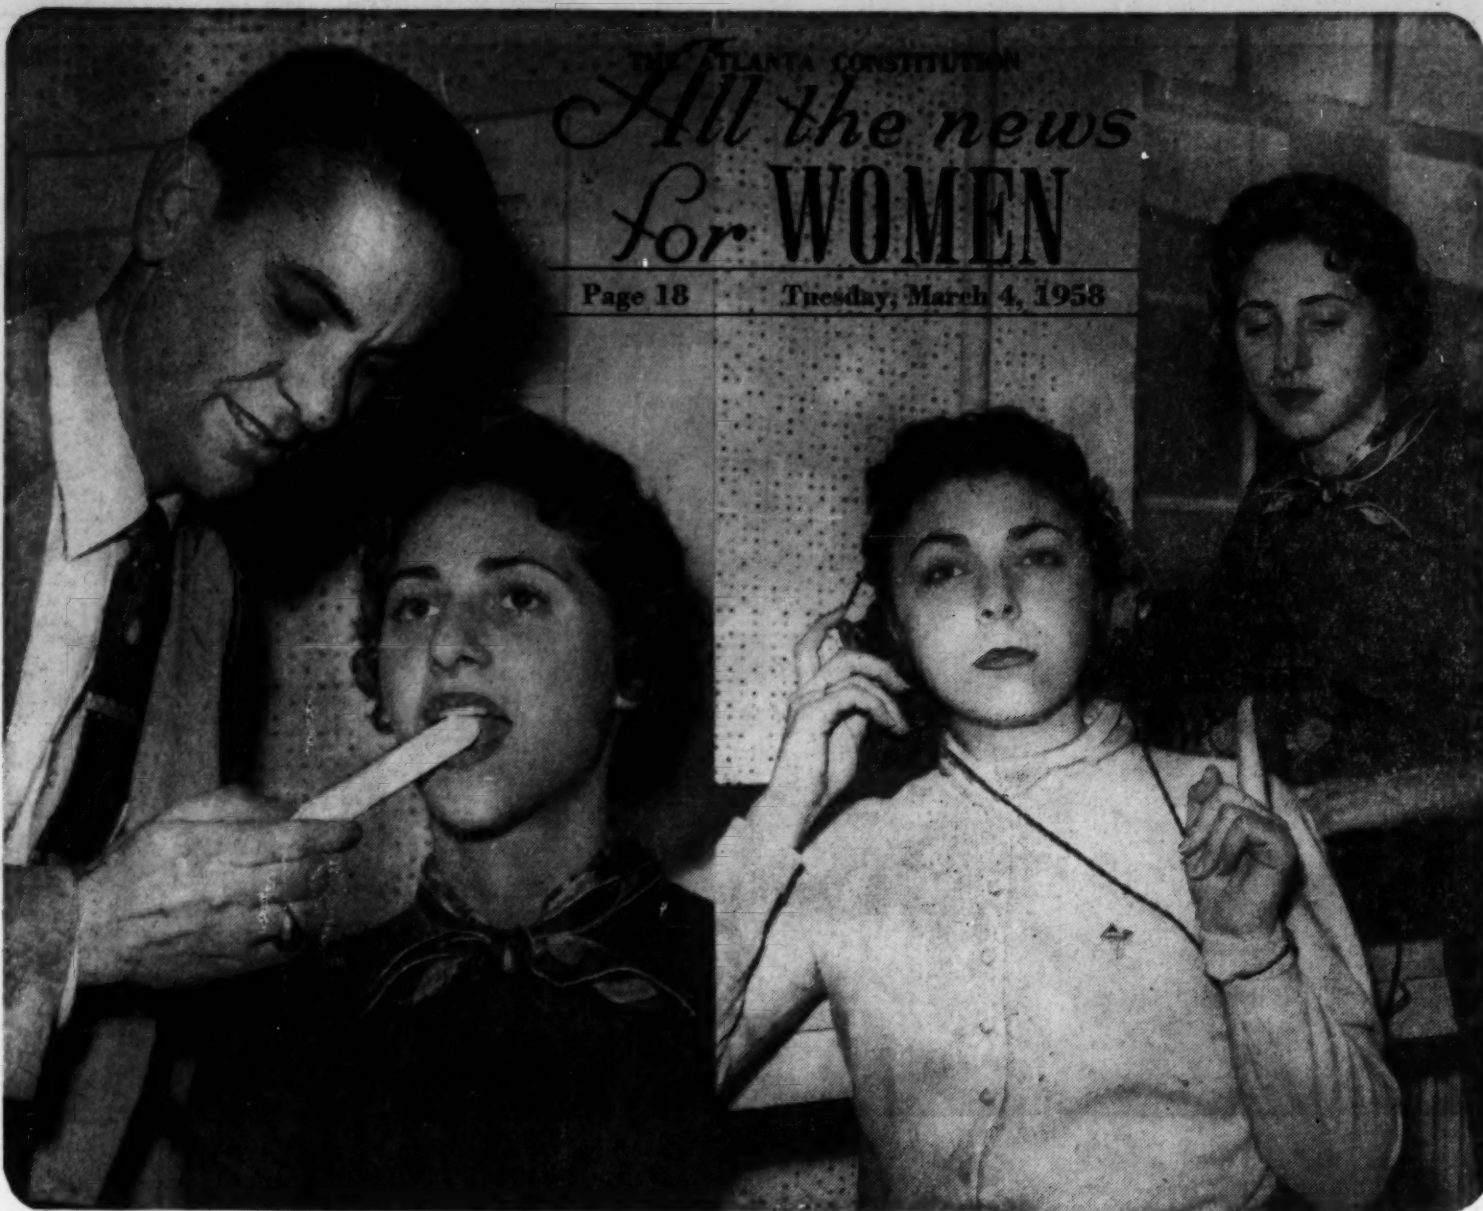

She knows I like her and I'm sure she likes me but I can't let her get away with things like this because she may get the idea she has me wrapped around her little finger, and she doesn't.

I think she should have more consideration and respect for me, and I would stand a better chance of dating her in the future if I break off with her now, temporarily. Am I right? What do you think I should do?

If you and this girl have a going steady agreement, she should have talked to you about the "favor" she did for her girl friend before she did it. However, if you are just dating, I think you are taking the whole thing too seriously and acting too possessive.

At 15 it is quite possible this girl doesn't really want to be tied down to one boy. So, I think it would be wise to talk it over with her. Try to find out how she really feels.

If she wants to date other boys — and you, too — be understanding and agreeable about it. After all, you will have the same privilege.

SEW IT FOR SUMMER

Patterns Are Winning Race for the Trapeze

By MARY PRIME

NEW YORK, March 3 (AP)—It looks like home-sewers will get the trapeze line before women who wear "store-bought" clothes.

Pattern companies are whipping up versions of the trapeze in time for women to sew their own for summer. Watch for pattern books to come out with the new style in April and May. Designer Yves Saint-Laurent of Dior launched the trapeze in Paris spring collections.

This new line is expected to draw as much pro-and-con furor as the chemise, and there's still a big wrangle about that," said Eleanor Williams, designer of Vogue patterns. "But in spite of the controversy, 50 per cent of our best-selling patterns are chemises. They're cooler in summer and a boon to the home-sewer," she said. AGAINST "BAGS"

Mrs. Williams predicted the biggest seller for summer will be the semi-fitted type of chemise, "Not the bags."

"Modified chemises are smarter looking than the old 'sausage look' in which everything was fitted. If you wear a sheath now, everyone knows it's last year's dress," she added.

Simplicity patterns reported the chemise is its top style for summer because "it's easy to make, fun to wear, and stylish. We're sure the trapeze influence also will be felt strongly," said a spokesman for the firm.

The sack gets the sack at Butterick patterns.

"The chemise is not doing well, and I don't think it will. Women who sew are more discriminating than women who buy their clothes, and they want a style which is more flattering to their figures," said Dorothy Hidalgo, the firm's production and promotion director.

"Most of our customers range from 27 years to their 40s, so they're not as eager to adopt new styles as working girls or teen-agers," she added.

SKIRTS ARE SHORTER
Today's woman has a slimmer figure and better fashion sense, the pattern experts agreed. Eastern women latch on to the latest styles the fastest. Women in the West prefer more casual clothes, separates, and the spectator look. The South has the most home sewers.

New styles, which appear at the rate of 30 to 50 a month among 500 to 900 patterns in a line, call for shorter skirts. But firms do not specify the length from the floor. Instead, measurements refer to the length from waist to hem in proportion to each size.

Patterns range from classical styles to the latest "originals," which Vogue reproduces line-for-line from designs in Paris, London, Rome and Madrid. Top styles are the chemise, blouse, over-blouse, the standard

Tobe Says

New Turbans Sit On Back of Head

The word "turban" automatically conjures up a picture of a hat that swaths the head and covers up the hair. Well, that's true of most of the turbans that are such an important spring hat fashion.

However, the latest additions to the turban family are completely different. They perch on the head so far back as a matter of fact that one wonders how they ever stay on! These look much younger than the others, and are especially well suited to the tousled, windblown hair-do that so many smart young women are now affecting.

This Chemise Is Suited for Junior Miss

One of the outstanding heavenly bodies in orbit around the fashion world is the chemise . . . sensationally curved to a junior's figure in Anne Adams Printed Pattern 4779.

Slim and streamlined from shoulder to hem, it skips the waist and narrows the hips to suggest rather than define the figure beneath.

Interpreted here in window-pane checks with a lingerie frill at the scooped neckline, the chemise is the smartest of summer fashions, and simple enough for beginners to sew.

The subtle shaping and fit of the silhouette is assured by the use of a dress-placket zipper in the new longer 14-inch length. This is so easy to apply with the "no-pin, no baste" method featured in the package.

Among the other spring and summer fabrics appropriate for this easy-sew printed pattern are pique, casual cotton knit, fluid silk shantung, textured linen, or crisp cotton.

Printed Pattern 4779 is available in junior miss sizes 9, 11, 13, 15, 17. Size 13 dress takes 2½ yards 35-inch fabric; vestee takes ¾ yard.

Just send 35 cents in coins for Printed Pattern 4779. Add five cents for first-class mailing. Send to Anne Adams, care of The Atlanta Constitution Pattern Department, P. O. Box 13, Old Chelsea Station, New York 11, New York.

Hux-Rainey Vows Spoken

DUBLIN, March 3—Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Hux of Fruitland Park, Fla., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Martha Judith Hux, to Boyce Tucker Rainey III, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. T. Rainey Jr. of Dublin.

The ceremony took place at the home of the bridegroom's grandfather, Judge Rufus I. Stephens, and Mrs. Stephens in Dublin.

The bride's mother gave her in marriage. She was attended by Miss Carol Rainey, the bridegroom's sister, as maid of honor.

Steve Rainey was best man for his brother, Judge Stephens officiated at the ceremony.

The bride wore a pale blue wool suit with white hat and accessories. She carried a Bible adorned with pink carnations.

After a wedding trip, the couple will live in Leesburg, Fla. Mr. Rainey is associated with the Container Corporation of America.

Speech Therapy Gadgets Replace Juke Box, Coffee

By HARRIETTE SCHREIBER

ATHENS, Ga., March 3—Blaring jazz and heart-rending ballads of the university hang-out's juke box have given way to more thrilling sounds—children's and grownups' first words.

Today the students in speech therapy and teaching of the mentally and physically retarded train where university coeds and college boys once met for between-class coffee breaks, the College Co-op.

A national shortage of specially trained teachers brought into being one of the newest programs of study at the University of Georgia, the Program for Exceptional Children.

And a building shortage moved the program into the Co-op, redecorated and specially equipped, while the Co-op moved on to new headquarters in Denmark Dining Hall.

50 MAJORS

Starting out in 1953 with four majors, the department now has 50 full-time majors with about 50 more students working toward their special education degrees during the summer term.

Lab work for the speech correction majors is obtained through the department's "speech clinic" with students and teachers working together on children and adult patients from the Athens, Atlanta and Gainesville areas.

Although the clinic is relatively new, more than 1,200 patients have been examined since 1953 and hundreds of others await their turns on the clinic's long waiting list.

The speech therapy involves rehabilitating persons with speech defects such as stuttering and inability to make certain sounds. Some of the defects occur from abnormal development while hearing or psychological problems cause other speech defects.

In order to handle the wide variety of cases and distinguish individual problems, the students are taught to diagnose the patients' problems through the administration and interpretation of certain tests; such as the audiometer to gauge and record the amount of hearing loss.

After deciding the major factors leading to the problem, the student must then map out the therapy for this particular case. The therapy is done both in individual and group sessions.

The student, and the future therapist, must not only be familiar with the methods of conducting the tests, but also be able to counsel parents and teachers and to confer with other professional workers.

HELP FOREIGN STUDENTS

The speech therapists work also with the foreign students on campus, helping them to master English pronunciation.

In order to carry out this broad field of responsibilities, the students are instructed in a wide variety of subjects to cover the biological processes involved, psychological factors, regular and special teaching methods and operation and interpretation of various machine tests.

The speech training at the university fulfills requirements set up by both the American Speech and Hearing Assn. and the State Department of Education.

Similar intensive training is conducted for student teachers in the mentally and physically handicapped divisions of the program.

An extensive research project in mental retardation is under way as a part of a $33,000 grant from the U.S. Office of Education to be completed in June, 1959.

Teachers of the mentally retarded, if they have regular classroom certificates, can receive a provisional certificate with 10 hours of work in the field of mental retardation and teaching methods for these mentally retarded children.

Many of the students will go to work in the public schools doing special education work. In 1957-58 there were 170 special teachers in the public schools of Georgia.

Headed by Dr. Stanley Ainsworth, the staff includes Dr. Harold L. Luper in speech correction and J. Dixon Emswiler and Mrs. Kathleen McCutcheon in education for the mentally retarded.

Celestine Sibley That SECOND Mountain

Hold the chair easy, children. It may take Mama a time to lower herself into it. The liniment's on the top shelf and when you've found it, reach me that piece of paper I dropped down there by my big toe. I can't . . . quite . . . stretch . . . that . . . far . . . and I did want to write a piece about . . . mountain . . . climb . . . ooooh EASY, I said!

Those mocking, misleading false friends, the mountains. How was I to know that at certain seasons of the year, say the first of March, the eternal hills, those symbols of serenity and constancy, act like what they ain't?

It certainly LOOKED like a little old hill. Right after lunch I noticed it. We hauled the old deal table off the porch and set it in the sun at the end of the house out of the wind. And after we had put away substantial quantities of Fried Chicken and sliced pork and potato salad and chocolate pound cake, brought by friends (I find it advantageous to invite friends to a picnic!), everybody dribbled off to their own pursuits.

The girls spread a blanket in the sun on the sheltered slope down near the beekeeper's spring. My son beat me to the hammock and our food-bearing friends packed up their platters and casseroles and said they had to go back to town. I was waving them off when I noticed the little old hill.

It rose up steeply from the point where Holly Creek makes a sparkling, tuneful "U" turn. I sat on the bank of the creek for some time allowing my lunch to settle and enjoying the sound the creek made as it rushed past that little hill. Then I began to notice that up the bank, after you got past the dense growth of laurel and rhododendron there were dogwood and maple trees nicely arranged for hand-holds. If a body, as we say in the mountains, wanted to climb that hill, you could sort of swing yourself from one little tree trunk to the other.

Or so it seemed.

Once my dog, Abel, and I had forded the creek, being careful not to slip on the mossy stones, the climb was straight up. Like climbing a ladder, except I never encountered a ladder that was carpeted with pine needles. I skidded and slipped and made half the climb on my stomach and Abel, intoxicated by the air and water, bounded ahead of me, scrambling up rocky precipices and sending dirt, leaves and pine cones showering down on my head.

When you've started something like that there's no going back. The only way to move is forward. I was puffing when I attained the top and had to sit a time in the sun to catch my breath. The wind stirred around in the valley, tossing tree tops and whipping the creek into a spray where it fell over the rocks, but it was still on my little mountain and Abel and I rested there a long time, watching the soft white clouds move lazily across the guileless March sky. The trunk of a dead and fallen tree leaned in the crotch of a big pine and sounded like a ship's rigging sighing and creaking as wood rubbed on wood.

Patches of mottled gray and dark green heart leaves grew nearby and I picked up a pine cone and admired the flower-like shape and markings of its petals. The sun drew a sharp, heady fragrance from hemlock and pine, and as I looked at creek and cabin roof and tree tops below me I must have become a little intoxicated myself. My eye rested on another hill on the other side of the creek, one even higher than the one on which I rested.

It was a beautiful blue, pointed hill and . . . well, the children say it's my fault and not the fault of the mountains. It's that SECOND mountain, they say in the tone of one alcoholic warning another about drink. Always pass up that SECOND mountain.

RED RASPBERRY RUSSE IS A VARIATION OF GRANDMOTHER'S RECIPE
A Dessert With a Base of Sliced Jelly Roll is Simple to Make but Delicious

Frozen Raspberries Bring Spring to Chilly March

By VIRGINIA DYSARD
Constitution Food Editor

June's dessert in early March is a raspberry russe.

The dessert itself is an old one, dating back to when grandmother made a charlotte russe which was simple to make but very delicious. A combination of whipped cream and lady fingers or sponge cake, grandmother couldn't live up her dessert with fresh fruit flavors and color in the dead of winter.

Thanks to the frozen fruits at all the markets, today's dessert is not only pretty and good but it offers a bit of spring and summer in the wintertime.

A raspberry russe is a particularly appropriate dessert for ending a heavy meal. Since it lends itself to elegance it can be served at a formal dinner just as well as a tea, bridge party or a supper.

To achieve the flavor and texture of this russe, frozen raspberries are pureed and added to a Bavarian cream made with raspberry gelatin, then molded in custard cups. A garnish of whipped cream and angelica bits complete the picture of year-round beauty.

The recipe makes 10 to 12 servings. You can make it up the day before the party or open house, and unmold a few at a time as guests arrive.

RASPBERRY RUSSE

$\frac{3}{4}$ cup boiling water
1 pkg. raspberry gelatin
3 eggs, separated
1 (8-oz.) pkg. frozen raspberries, thawed
1 tbsp. lemon juice
1 cup. salt
1 cup. sugar
1 can heavy cream
1 jelly roll, sliced
Whipped cream
Angelica
Pour water over gelatin and stir until dissolved. Beat egg yolks until light; slowly stir in hot gelatin. Press raspberries and syrup through strainer into gelatin mixture. Add lemon juice and salt. Chill, stirring occasionally to keep smooth until slightly thickened. Beat egg whites until foamy; add sugar slowly; beat until stiff. Whip cream. Fold beaten egg whites into slightly thickened gelatin; fold in cream. Spoon into 10 to 12 custard cups. Chill until firm. Unmold each onto a jelly roll slice. Garnish with a dab of whipped cream and 2 thin slices of angelica. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Davis, Sumerford Plans Told

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Davis of Dublin announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ethel Patricia Davis, to Harold Andrews Sumerford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene R. Sumerford of Americus.

The marriage will be solemnized on March 16 at the First Baptist Church of Dublin, with the Rev. Charles H. Allen as officiant.

Miss Davis was graduated from Dublin High School where she was a member of the Future Homemakers of America and served as pianist for the group. She also attended the School of Nursing, Atlanta.

Mr. Sumerford attended Georgia Southwestern College and is now studying industrial management at Georgia Tech where he is a member of the Sigma Nu Fraternity.

India Woman Beats The Winter in a Sari

By GLORIA EMERSON

(Copyright, 1958, by The New York Times Co.)

NEW YORK, March 3—A slender young woman dressed for tropical temperatures was not bothered by the recent wave of arctic weather.

While most citizens were concerned with fur-lined boots and electric blankets, Hira Nirodi, the only Indian woman executive in the United States, did not even shiver. Wearing thong sandals on her bare feet and a fragile-looking cotton sari over a thin blouse and long petticoat, Miss Nirodi made only one concession to the weather: she wore a winter coat and, whenever the streets are slushy, she substitutes closed flat-heeled shoes for sandals.

In her office on East 49th street, where she is assistant director of the India Government Tourist Office, Miss Nirodi evokes the image of India as effectively as the vivid posters on the walls. Dressed exactly as she would be at her home in Bangalore—a city in the south of India—her appearance has changed in one respect. She now wears a light pink shade of lipstick.

RED POWDER

The only makeup Miss Nirodi brought from India was a small supply of red powder that is used for the "tikki," or round dot, on the forehead. The powder is daubed on the skin after petroleum jelly is applied. Like rouge or mascara, it is simply an embellishment and does not connote caste.

Indian women have their own techniques with make-ups, Miss Nirodi observed. Lipstick is rarely worn among the women of Bangalore. For a manicure, they crush the leaves of a "mendhi" plant and apply the paste to their nails. At least one hour is required for the nails to dry. The paste is then peeled off, leaving a permanent coral tint.

Indian women have their own "doe-eyed" look and it is not unusual for 5-year-old girls to have heavily made-up eyes. A paste called "kajal" or "kohl" is made by mixing soot with castor oil. It is applied to both rims of the eyes and it allegedly has a cooling, soothing effect.

PIERCED EARS

Most Indian women begin to oil their hair during childhood so that it can be arranged more smoothly and have a brighter sheen. Much is made of jewelry, too, for girls have their ears pierced 12 days after they are born.

Indian women can be secure about their wardrobes, for no fashion designer has yet rendered the sari obsolete.

When Miss Nirodi arrived in New York, she came with a long-range but lightweight wardrobe: 25 blouses, 20 saris of silk, cotton and chiffon, 15 cotton petticoats that go to the ankles and 12 pairs of leather sandals.

MANY CHANGES

At home, she explained, servants cost little and do all the family laundry. Consequently, an average woman could conceivably change saris four or five times a day.

Although she doesn't feel she will have to replace or augment the fundamentals in her wardrobe, Miss Nirodi does appreciate American-made lingerie. She is most pleased with brassieres that have adjustable straps, since the necklines of her blouses are very wide. Her reaction to girdles is noncommittal. Indian women seldom wear them with saris.

And while she admires high heels, sandals impress her as more appropriate and comfortable.

When asked what she liked best to buy in the stores, considering her self-sufficiency, Miss Nirodi replied like a woman who knows her own mind: "Your marvelous shampoos."

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 3.—A woman who received a $5 parking violation ticket mailed in half the amount.

"I was only sticking half way out in the street," she explained "so I'm only paying half the fine."

Police said she will have two weeks to pay the rest or face arrest.

Jet Crash Kills Commander of Starfighter Unit

HAMILTON AIR FORCE BASE, Calif., March 3.—The wing commander of the Air Force's first unit of fast new F104 Starfighter jet planes was killed today in the crash of one of the planes at the north end of San Francisco Bay.

He was Lt. Col. Raymond E. Evans, 36, commander of the 83rd Fighter Interceptor Squadron based here which received the fast new planes 11 days ago.

An Air Force spokesman said Evans was returning from a training flight. He said Evans, a veteran jet plane test pilot, appeared to be making a normal approach when his craft, slowed to about 300 miles an hour, crashed into the bay.

The Starfighter, the spokesman said, is capable of reaching 1400 m.p.h., twice the speed of sound. Evans, a native of Lebanon, Ind., flew 154 combat missions in World War II and 48 in Korean action. He lived with his wife, Adella, and their two children, Nancy, 9, and Paul, 8, at Hamilton.

County Opens Bids for New Service Building

Bids will be received Tuesday by the Fulton County Board of Education on a new services building to replace the present maintenance building which has been condemned for Expressway right of way.

Paul D. West, county school superintendent, said the school board will open bids at 3 p.m. for the building which will be constructed on a site at Cleveland avenue and Springdale road, SW.

The new structure, which will be constructed with funds derived from the price paid for the present structure in condemnation proceedings, will house the system's maintenance, textbook, library, audio-visual, lunchroom, health and education, art and music departments.

The present maintenance building is located at the corner of Central and Woodward avenues, SW.

2 N.Y. Hotels Are Swapped in $30 Million Deal

NEW YORK, March 3 (UP).—Two of the nation's biggest and plushiest hotels, the Sheraton-Astor and the Ambassador, both in New York, were swapped today in a $30-million dollar turnabout.

The Broadway area Sheraton-Astor, which immediately went back to its old name of the Astor, was acquired by a subsidiary of Webb & Knapp, controlled by real estate magnate William Zeckendorf. In turn, Webb & Knapp gave the Ambassador to the Sheraton Corporation of America. Webb & Knapp also obtained two east side city blocks in the deal.

An authoritative source said the deal involved 30-million dollars worth of real estate on the island that the Indians sold for $26 worth of colored beads.

BLUNT WORDS FROM U.S. OFFICIAL

Quit Moping and Rebuild Faith In Economy, Industry Is Advised

WASHINGTON, March 3 (AP).—A top Commerce Department official today advised businessmen who are worried about the economy to "get off their seats" and help restore consumer confidence in the future.

The bluntly-worded advice was given to members of the Manufacturing Chemists Association here by Assistant Secretary Frederick H. Mueller. He blamed a "hard core of professional pessimists" for much of the lack of confidence in the future.

"It ill behooves a businessman to sit glumly by, exuding a spirit of defeat, because he can't see record profits in the year immediately ahead," Mueller said.

He said the skid in business activity over the past few months "adds up to a recession" but it is by no means a depression. A "depression, believe me, is one thing we are not faced with at the present time," Mueller said.

Other economic developments:—Andrew J. Biemiller, AFL-CIO legislative director, laid the recession at the door of what he called the administration's "pro-business policies and unfair tax law changes enacted by the GOP-controlled Congress in 1954."

—The administration assured Congress it was "studying earnestly" the possibility of increasing the already-large percentage of foreign aid military purchases in this country to provide more jobs.

—The U. S. Chamber of Commerce urged Congress to slash farm price supports, repeal the soil bank and help some farmers find city jobs to help those farmers who remain on the land.

Mueller said, "The government has no magic wand to wave over this situation and make it right." He said everyone who prospered during the boom had a duty "to get out and tell the truth about the strength of our underlying economic foundation."

—All jails in the County were thoroughly inspected and found to be satisfactory, clean and adequately supervised. We wish to make the following specific comments:

1. Appraisal is made.
2. Property owner is contacted, by mail, and offer made—
3. If no agreement is reached or if no answer received in 14 days, then matter is turned over to legal department, for condemnation proceedings.

We would like to urge those in authority—local, state and federal—to do everything within their power to hasten the completion of these projects, not just for the benefit of the residents of Atlanta and the surrounding area, but for the benefit of all Georgia.

1. Atlanta is a distribution center, bringing in merchandise by the train-load and distributing it to all the state by the truck-load.

2. Atlanta is a manufacturing center.

3. Atlanta is a defense center, et cetera.

Anything that is done that will speed up and make more efficient all the functions of this main hub, known as Atlanta, will be of vital help to all of Georgia and the Southeast—not only in a commercial way, but also in many other vital ways in case of a national emergency. We would like to urge that the newspapers start and continue an educational and selling program so that all the residents of Georgia will realize that this is not a sectional project, but a project for all the people and in such a program there will, of necessity, be more money spent in some areas than others.

TRAFFIC
In order to alleviate congestion and confusion on the Expressway system, the following suggestions are respectfully offered for the consideration of State, County and City officials who have jurisdiction over traffic on the above system:

1. That an education plan be adopted in order to speed up traffic as well as make it safer for those who are riding on the system. Slow traffic at peak hours causes "in and out" weaving and is a dangerous practice. The inside lane at present is a 40-M.P.H. minimum—50-M.P.H. maximum. For a period of six months this Juror suggests that this be raised to 45-M.P.H. minimum and the maximum equal to the State system of 60 M.P.H. during the day and 50 M.P.H. at night.

At the present time there is no law on the books for law enforcement officers to enforce the minimum speed requirements. A slow driver who holds up traffic and causes weaving is dangerous, not that he personally is involved, but people behind him become exasperated and cut in and out. With a higher minimum this dangerous practice should be strictly enforced and consequently the slow driver and weaving driver should be penalized.

It is further suggested to post signs on the bridges along the routes showing the lane speed:

45 MIN.—60 MAX. SLOW LANE

2. Route marking, North-South and East-West, be in the regulation State prescribed manner, but with the exception that colored backgrounds made of "Scotch lite" or other similar material be used. For example, Highway 41 North to be in blue and Highway 41 South in green, Highway 78 West in red, etc. This would facilitate easy recognition for through traffic as color is much easier to follow than a mass of numbers.

3. More advance signs should be put up to the show the next exit. This would help out-of-town travelers to be ready for an exit and consequently would not have to slow down and make a decision.

4. Permanent guard rail fences should be installed to replace the cyclone separating pedestrian fences which are in constant repair and cause one-lane traffic while repairs are being made.

5. Additional exits are needed badly. For example, Piedmont Road and Lenox Road are badly overtaxed. Funds have been voted to widen Piedmont either with Federal or State aid. A bond issue has been voted for a four-lane road between Lenox and Piedmont to cross Peachtree Road. The Juror feels this connector should be started at once and serious consideration be given to combining this new connector with Roswell Road to better serve this area. At the completion of this road, then decide on the widening of Piedmont to either four or six lanes as needed.

Cross traffic should not have to cross each other. Consideration should be given to "Yield" signs to replace "Stop" signs and traffic signs. This not only speeds up traffic, but is less dangerous.

FAIRBURN JAIL—We commend the City of Fairburn on its new jail. The appearance and well-planned facilities are a credit to the County.

CITY OF ATLANTA JAIL—We found the city jail operated very efficiently. Actually, it is more of a temporary detention institution rather than a jail for an increasing volume of offenders. Plans for the new building addition should improve and facilitate handling of the volume of prisoners.

PRISON CAMPS—We found the facilities and morale of prisoners and personnel satisfactory in every respect. Warden Carl Mills and his staff are commended for their fine program towards rehabilitation of prisoners in their custody.

WE CONCUR in a previous Grand Jury's recommendation that consideration be given to furnish needy prisoners with a small amount of money to tide them over the first few days after being set free and to cover transportation to their residence if possible.

WELFARE
After consultation with the Administrator of the Board of Public Welfare and members of his staff, we believe that this department is extremely well operated and is doing an efficient job.

We found that the Fulton County appropriation for the operation of public welfare has not increased over the past five years in proportion to the population changes and appears to be fairly well stabilized.

We find that there are many cases where public assistance is granted on which there should be recovery under the Relative Responsibility Law or Lien Laws which are already on the statute books. Unfortunately these laws are so written that there is no compulsion on the part of various interested parties to institute the action and we are informed that so far as the Fulton County Department is concerned, they have never brought a case for recovery of assistance which had been granted. We feel that the Fulton County Board of Public Welfare should recommend and attempt to have passed enforceable and effective Relative Responsibility Laws and we urge our members of the Legislature to conform in this suggestion. We quote pertinent passages from the Relative Responsibility Act, No. 444, under head of "Old-Age Assistance":

OLD-AGE ASSISTANCE
No. 444 (Senate Bill No. 194)
"An Act to amend an Act, approved Feb. 26, 1937, (Ga. Laws 1937, p. 311), known as the 'Old-Age Assistance Act,' by including in said Act a section to provide for the responsibility of financially able children to support needy parents applying for old-age assistance and for recovery of any assistance paid in cases involving children who, although reasonably able to support needy parents are refusing or failing to do so, to repeal conflicting laws, and for other purposes."

"Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Georgia, and it is hereby enacted by the authority aforesaid:—
"Section 1. Responsibility of financially able children. If any recipient of old-age assistance has any child or children, who, in accordance with income and resources tables established by the State Department of Public Welfare, are able to support him but who fail to provide such support, the amount granted as assistance to the recipient shall be recoverable from such child or children in a civil action provided that judgment in the trial court is rendered during the lifetime of the recipient. It shall be the duty of the county department to refer to the Director of the State Department, or proper legal authorities, all cases involving children who, although reasonably able to support needy parents receiving old-age assistance, are refusing or failing to do so.

"Section 2. From and after the passage of this Act it shall be the duty of all persons twenty-one years of age or over, of sufficient income, after reasonably providing for his own family, to provide or assist in providing for the support and maintenance of his or her mother or aged or infirm father, he or she being then and there in destitute or necessitous circumstances.

"Section 3. That all laws and parts of laws in conflict with this Act be and the same are hereby repealed.

"Approved Feb. 21, 1951."

As can be seen, the above does not set forth specifically who should be authorized to file suit against such children and until this Act is amended and clarified, it is doubtful if the County can recover funds to which it should be entitled.

There are many cases in which assistance has been rendered to individuals owning real estate. Upon their death, this real estate passes to their heirs, although under the laws, the county might well have established an enforceable lien and made some collection for the assistance rendered.

Nursing and Boarding Homes are not under the direct supervision of the Welfare Department. However, the Welfare Department places many of its cases in these homes and is very conversant with the situation. While there have been many rumors concerning the operation of such homes, there have been no specific cases called to the attention of the Committee which could be investigated. In order for these homes to be licensed, they must first obtain a permit from the Fulton County Health Department, and are subject to regular examination under their usual procedures. These homes rate all the way from very good to poor, varying in most cases directly in proportion to the fees charged. Because of financial limitations, the Welfare Department frequently has to recommend or use the lower-price homes in making their placements. However, we are informed that all of the homes used meet the minimum requirements set out by the licensing authority and are properly licensed.

We wish to thank the Administrator of the Fulton County Department of Public Welfare. We found Mr. Ellis and all of his staff most cooperative. All of their records were thrown open to us and we feel that the administration of this department is done in an orderly and efficient manner.

TAXATION
We are aware of the growing difficulties of the City of Atlanta and other municipalities in the county in their efforts to fairly extend and broaden their basis of revenue for needed administrative and operational purposes.

It is generally accepted that the tax burden now assessed against real estate has reached an intolerable proportion and other sources and means of taxation must be found and authorized. We understand this condition is true throughout the state with nearly all Municipalities being in need of additional means and sources of general revenue.

The problem appears to require a study and authority more broad and general than that which is vested in Municipalities. Therefore, we recommend that our city and county officials collaborate with our local legislative delegation for the stated purpose of obtaining relief to this growing problem.

An equitable, lawful and practicable manner of extending and broadening the tax base of our City and Municipalities must be found and the problem properly addressed itself to the General Assembly of our State.

FLUORIDATION
This Grand Jury has thoroughly evaluated all information obtainable on the use of fluorides for public water supplies. The members of the present Grand Jury have listened to designated representatives of a group of citizens of this County who oppose the use of fluorides in Fulton County and City of Atlanta water; and after making a full study of the problems, we, the members of the January-February, 1958, Fulton County Grand Jury, wish to go on record as endorsing the recommendations of a former Grand Jury, approving the use of controlled fluoridation for Fulton County and City of Atlanta, Georgia, water.

We further request that the proper authorities be immediately notified of this action, and trust that ways and means will be provided, without delay, for our citizens to receive the benefit of fluoridation.

BUSINESS PRACTICES
This Grand Jury has worked with the Atlanta Better Business Bureau in the development of better business practices and ethics. We urge the incoming Grand Jury to continue to work with the Better Business Bureau in the elimination of unfair and unethical business practices.

We heartily commend the Atlanta Better Business Bureau on the fine constructive program which they are carrying out.

SANDTOWN PETITION
This Grand Jury accepts receipt of a petition from the citizens of a Sandtown Civic group requesting additional services in that area. This petition will be passed on to the next session of the Grand Jury.

It is unfortunate that in an emergency there was no official in the City of Atlanta who could provide assistance in this case. There should be some high authority who could take care of matters of this type.

We urge also that the Fulton County Commissioners further investigate the need for fire protection in the unincorporated areas with regard to providing such services where feasible.

LEGISLATION
We would like to endorse the recommendations by previous Grand Juries that three particular pieces of legislation be pushed by our representatives:

1. The Grand Jury Extension Bill.

2. A bill to provide that the Judge shall fix sentence.

3. A bill providing that the defendant in any criminal trial shall be sworn in as any other witness if he desires to present any facts to the Jury.

SOLICITOR GENERAL
This Grand Jury wishes to express its appreciation of the efficiency, courtesy and cooperation of Solicitor Webb and the members of his staff.

PUBLICATION
We recommend that these presentments be published in The Atlanta Journal, The Atlanta Constitution and the Fulton County Daily Report not later than Tuesday, March 4, 1958.

This the 28th day of February, 1958.

Respectfully submitted,

Measles
Is Spread
By Cough

By DR. T. R. VAN DELLEN
Measles is so contagious, almost everyone has had the disease by age 25. Epidemics occur in the winter and spring. After exposure, the susceptible develop the rash in one to two weeks. Babies usually escape because they inherit a six-month supply of immunity from mother.

The measles virus is spread through coughing and sneezing. The condition is most contagious in the early stages, especially during the day or two preceding the eruption.

These prerashers generally are sent to school because their mothers are not aware that the youngsters are coming down with the infection. As a result, the entire class is exposed.

Early symptoms resemble a cold and consist of headache, cough, lack of appetite, fever and malaise. One of the first signs of measles, not visible to the parents, are the Koplik spots in the mouth. Small white dots on a red background are seen along the inside of the cheeks in the region of the molars.

The rash begins behind the ears and on the neck and face and spreads over the chest, back, trunk and extremities. The youngster looks and feels uncomfortable. The eyes are red and swollen and sensitive to light. The cough is raspy, tight and persistent. The skin lesions begin fading on the fourth day and vanish in the same order they appeared.

The victim of measles is left with lasting immunity because of the continued presence in the blood stream of specific antibodies against the measles virus. These fighters stand ready to stave off a second invasion.

So many people have had measles, any mixture of blood is bound to contain a number of these protective antibodies. The preventive serum (gamma globulin) is made from blood pooled in this way. An injection of a large dose, prior to the sixth day after exposure, prevents measles and protects the child for three weeks thereafter.

It does not confer permanent immunity, which is why many physicians prefer to let nature take its course when the child otherwise is healthy. Smaller doses of the serum, given prior to the sixth day, modify the disease. This is a more logical plan because the child develops the ailment with a minimum of discomfort and lasting immunity follows.

3rd Filipino Jailed
In Garcia Death Plot

MANILA, March 3 (UP) — Authorities disclosed today they had arrested a third suspect in connection with an alleged plot to assassinate President Carlos P. Garcia.

Officials said Benjamin Binongcal, 22, had a .22 caliber target pistol in his possession when he was picked up along the highway route the President was to have taken yesterday on a trip from Baguio City to Manila. Garcia later changed his plans and decided to stay in Baguio.

Two other men were arrested Saturday.

Spring Has Sprung

The soothing sunshine was a pleasant reminder that players and coaches were thawing out at Georgia, Auburn and Clemson, so it seemed an ideal day to inquire about spring football training.

Wallace Butts and Ralph Jordan are holding final rehearsals this week for annual squad games next Saturday afternoon. Squire Frank Howard won't preview his Clemson edition until March 22, two days before Georgia Tech opens drills.

Outlar

Butts continued, "but we're better off there than we were last year. Jimmy Vickers, Gordon Kelly and Aaron Box have come a long way. Bill Herron, a junior college transfer, and Norman King look like they may help us.

"We need more size and speed at halfback, and we're still hunting for a kicker. Bobby Walden, Charley Britt, Tommy Paris, Heron, Bobby Towns and Cicero Lucas have all been doing some punting."

Butts seemed satisfied with the linemen in general and center Dave Lloyd in particular.

"Lloyd has looked fine," Butts praised. "He hasn't missed a minute of practice despite a hand injury and, as you know, he likes to play."

—They're Smiling Down on The Plain

Johnny Griffith and Quinton Lumpkin will coach the Reds, and Cal Stoll and Charley Trippi will handle the Whites. Tommy Lewis, Francis Tarkenton and Glenn Nunley will quarterback the Whites. Britt, who led the Whites to a 48-0 romp last year, will call signals for the Reds this outing, along with Charlie Byars and Paris.

No team in college football is more squarely on the spot than Auburn. You can't finish higher than No. 1 in the nation, and every foe will be gunning for the Plainsmen.

However, there are no complaints from Coach Jordan. He realizes that Auburn is on the spot, but it's a good spot to be on. "Our boys take a lot of pride in last year's record," Jordan recently said, "and it certainly doesn't hurt their morale."

Jordan doesn't flinch when you mention that Auburn may be even better than last season's powerhouse. He quickly reminds you, however, that the team could be better and not have the same record. For, of course, some opponents may show improvement.

Jordan was attending a banquet Monday, so backfield coach Buck Bradberry served as a spokesman. Bradberry, who ordinarily doesn't view things through rose colored glasses, admits that the Plainsmen are looking "very good."

Lloyd Nix, who has missed most of the rough work due to a knee injury, indicated in last Saturday's scrimmage that the lay-off hasn't bothered him. Bradberry considered Nix the "most reliable" quarterback in the conference last year, and he figures to be better in '58.

Sophomore Eddie Dyer and Roy Brazil have excited coaches with their bruising fullbacking, but injured Ronnie Robbs is still the "regular." Lamar Rawson looks as though he'll be able to wear Bobby Hoppe's shoes, and he has help from Bobby Lauder and Billy Kitchens. Tommy Lorino returns at left half, enough said.

—Howard Discusses Tigers and Sputniks

Jackie Burkett is Auburn's version of the best center in the nation, and end Jerry Wilson will be an All-America candidate. Zeke Smith returns at guard, and the Plainsmen will be able to take care of themselves up front. You can look in on the premiere next Saturday afternoon.

After discussing world affairs for a few minutes, Howard got around to saying that he was pleased with Clemson's showing in the first six workouts.

"You know that Sputnik thing has caused a world of trouble," Howard volunteered. "Everybody seems hell bent on going to Mars or the moon. Atlanta is far enough for me. Somebody has got to stay down here and guard earth."

"By the way," Howard continued, "I hope Georgia Tech is playing Ivy League football by the time we get down there next fall."

Steered back to the squad roster, Howard said that Clemson's first team should be just as strong as last year. However, he doesn't believe, at the moment, that the Tigers will have as much depth.

Anyone who has seen Harvey White perform understands why Coach Howard enjoys talking about his junior ace. When White came to Clemson, Howard said he had a boy who was going to make him look like a heckuva T coach. He hasn't changed his mind.

"White, George Ustry, Doug Cline and Rudy Hayes look like they'll make up our first string backfield," Howard said, "but it's too early to tell."

"This big old Osborne boy (Ronnie) from Cleveland, Ga., looks like he's going to make a tough tackle. But I've got to trim him down some."

"We're looking for some guards," Howard continued. "You know we lost some good ones, and we have to replace some other linemen. But things look pretty good."

Perhaps it was the sunshine, for all three coaches sounded happy.

NEW TIGER GROWL

Martin Explains Inspiration: Money Doesn't Talk---It Yells

LAKELAND, Fla., March 3 (AP)—Before he has rapped out a single base hit or made a single putout for the Detroit Tigers, Billy Martin has become the good doctor who is supposed to cure most of the club's ailments.

The arrival of the peppery infielder has greatly stirred the Tigers' early camp and the former New York Yankee and Kansas City Athletic player is the center of attraction wherever he goes.

Martin is supposed to play shortstop for the Tigers, relieving Harvey Kuenn, who is supposed to switch to center field.

Not everyone is certain Martin can play shortstop. He has been a second baseman and a third baseman all his life.

"A couple of sports writers told me they didn't think I could play shortstop," said Martin. "But I told 'em it wouldn't be the first time sports writers were wrong. If I can't play it, I'll be the first to know it. And I'll find myself another position on the team."

The Tigers, to a man, like Martin just the way he is—brash, cocky-sure, headstrong.

"I never saw such a fuss about one ball player," said one camp veteran. "You'd think the Tigers had just landed Mickey Mantle or Ted Williams."

General Manager John McHale believes "Martin may come to mean to the Detroit club everything that Mantle and Williams mean to the Yankees and the Red Sox."

McHale got Martin and five other Kansas City players in a 13-man swap with Kansas City last November. One of them,

Georgia Loses Finale, 85-77

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., March 3 (AP)—Burt Deckel and Hugh Durham put on a two-man scoring show in the second half Monday night to pace Florida State to an 85-77 victory over Georgia.

They scored 34 of the Seminoles' 49 points in the second half to overcome Georgia's 44-36 half-time lead. Together, Deckel and Durham outscored the Bulldogs who managed 33 points in that period.

Georgia led for most of the first half but lost its edge when Henry Cabiness, who scored 16 of his 18 points during the first half, fouled out early in the final period.

Deckel finished with 27 points.

The game closed the season for both teams. It was the Seminoles' ninth win against 16 losses and Georgia's 19th loss against seven triumphs.

Blemker's Return Accelerates Tech Baseball Rebuilding Job

SEC Champs Lose Infield

By MICKEY LOGUE

Marse Joe Pittard rolled out the welcome mat Monday for the winningest pitcher in the Southeastern Conference.

Southpaw Buddy Blemker, who spent the winter hitting basketball bull's-eyes for Georgia Tech, returned to the scene of his greatest triumph.

Blemker, author of eight victories in as many tries, cut down Alabama's elite slugging corps and sealed Tech's first SEC baseball championship with a home-run kiss at Rose Bowl Field last May.

After hanging up another excellent basketball season at Nashville Saturday night, the 5-10, 185-pound junior wasted no time getting back to his diamond love.

Buddy brought 72 strikeouts in 72 2/3 innings with him, plus a 1.36 earned-run average. He stroked a warm .290 and was dangerous with men aboard. No wonder coach Pittard had the right hand of fellowship out for Blemker. Clutch guys like him don't arrive at anybody's campus often.

What's more, Blemker brought two basketball buddies with him. Regular guard Terry Randall, a third-base hopeful, and sub forward George Inman, a catching candidate, also joined the baseball fraternity.

Despite the welcome players and sunshine, two ex-jackets were on hand to stir pleasant Pittard memories that could bring a painful future.

Shortstop Lane Akers and third sacker Johnny Menger, best left side of a conference infield in several seasons, were there—but without eligibility. Akers is assisting Pittard until he finishes school in June, at which time Kansas City will have a place for him.

The other side of the infield—second-baseman Gray Potter and first-baseman Vince Terry—also is missing. So are starting outfielders Dick Gookin and Bobby Dover.

For a man with a tremendous rebuilding job, Pittard seemed extremely cheerful Monday. But he had considerable reason.

"We should be stronger down the middle than last year," Pittard explained. "Ted Thomas and George Inman give us the best catchers we've ever had. Blemker will have more help on the mound. We have moved Doug Veazey from short to second."

What's more, Blemker brought two basketball buddies with him. Regular guard Terry Randall, a third-base hopeful, and sub forward George Inman, a catching candidate, also joined the baseball fraternity.

Despite the welcome players and sunshine, two ex-jackets were on hand to stir pleasant Pittard memories that could bring a painful future.

Shortstop Lane Akers and third sacker Johnny Menger, best left side of a conference infield in several seasons, were there—but without eligibility. Akers is assisting Pittard until he finishes school in June, at which time Kansas City will have a place for him.

The other side of the infield—second-baseman Gray Potter and first-baseman Vince Terry—also is missing. So are starting outfielders Dick Gookin and Bobby Dover.

For a man with a tremendous rebuilding job, Pittard seemed extremely cheerful Monday. But he had considerable reason.

"We should be stronger down the middle than last year," Pittard explained. "Ted Thomas and George Inman give us the best catchers we've ever had. Blemker will have more help on the mound. We have moved Doug Veazey from short to second."

ANCHORS AWEIGH, LADS—MOM'S JOINED THE FISHING NAVY

By CHARLES ELLIOTT

No kiddin'! You've got to give the gals plenty of credit for sound judgment and for being able to see further than their compact mirrors. Since man lived in a cave, they've been the core, the backbone, the backbone of every family group. To follow their men and their kids into every type of interest or endeavor, they've done things which often had no more appeal to their natural feminine instincts than quilting bedspreads would have for the ordinary male. They've sacrificed themselves for the simple reason that those virile occupations fascinate Dad — or the young 'uns. And now, in increasing numbers every year, they are taking to the hook and line, to angling, to boats and the outdoors.

Don't misunderstand me. I think it's the greatest thing that's happened to fishing since Sir

Izaak Walton took his pen in hand and wrote it off the books as a means of getting meat for the table, and put around it an aura of fun and sportsmanship. And strangely enough, many of the gals who gave up their hours at home, in the beauty parlor havens and around the bridge tables to be with their men in the outdoors, have become more ardent addicts than the guys themselves.

Have you been to the Southeast Boat and Vacation Show yet? Take a good look. You'll see a few old stags nosing around. You'll see mostly family groups—Dad, Mom, Junior and Sis, getting great fun together out of the stage show and exhibits, together picking out the boat they can afford now, and looking with dreamy plans at the shapely crafts they'd like to own some day. You can watch them and know that they'll whack and slice and trim that family budget to provide for a wonderful one or two weeks in some lakeside cottage.

Last month I was on Lake Apopka in central Florida with Ted Henson. Ted and I have soaked a lot of lures together in briny water and fresh.

He was national casting champion for a couple of years and is one of the best fishermen I know, so it's natural that he should end up in the tackle peddling business.

That day on Apopka, the wind blew so hard that it had our ears flapping, so we crossed the business of fishing had been invented for women instead of men. They weren't catching many fish. No one did—it wasn't that kind of a day. But I never saw a crowd of folks who seemed to be enjoying themselves more thoroughly.

I enjoy fishing with Miss Kayle, as much as anyone I know. I'll admit there are times when I'd like to mule-whip her right out of the boat, when she gets to chortling over some crazy bass that happened to pick up her lure instead of mine. The only trouble with that gal is that she's become too educated about rods and lines and lures and such. I used to be able to palm my old broken-down tackle off on her. Now it's me who has to fish with it.

But I'm proud that our gals have taken up the gentle art of angling, though it's not too gentle the way some of them do it. At least they can understand why it is necessary to put a pan under that leak in the roof, and spend the money for having the outboard motor overhauled. It's the little things like those which make for happier domestic relations.

lake to a quiet cove on the leeward side. Everyone else had the same idea and the crowded coves looked like a string of colorful regattas. One of the first things Ted called to my attention was the number of fishermen in the boats. Most were speckled perch fishers, dunking minnows at the ends of long cane poles. But they outnumbered the guys. Many of the boats contained lady anglers only, and they handled motors, paddles and fishing poles as though the

REPORT FROM OUTDOORS

Hunters Find Home On Alaskan Range

By JIM CARSON

Just when the justified cries of "no public hunting lands" are the loudest, it's encouraging to learn of the opening of a virgin wilderness, even though it's many miles removed from Georgia.

Jim Carson

This year the 9,000,000 acres of Alaska's Brooks Range will open to sportsmen.

George B. Schaller, a University of Wisconsin graduate student who helped a research party catalogue the wildlife in the area, writes about it in the March issue of Outdoor Life.

Schaller traveled over much of the area and found an abundance of caribou, Dall sheep, grizzlies, moose, wolves, wolverines, lynx and other varieties. Huge flocks of migratory waterfowl were counted. Streams and lakes are fish rich.

The game had never been seen man before, and Schaller reported some caribou browsed close enough to be touched. This was true also of bird life.

At a time when hunters spend nearly as much time looking for a place to hunt as they do hunting, the Brooks Range is good news.

OUTDOOR NOTES—Georgia Gun Collectors had a trading good time this weekend at their first convention here. And the more than million dollars worth of firearms—antiques, Army models, customs and the latest major models—was worth more than the free admission. . . . Atlanta trap shooter Ed Garlington continues to win on the Florida circuit. Latest victory of Ed's comeback trail is the Class A doubles (score of 91x100) in the Gulf Coast Midwinter Shoot at Sarasota. . . . The north Georgia man who killed two does and two bucks on a Chattahoochee managed hunt last fall paid $700 for it Saturday. He also got a suspended sentence of one year. . . . Atlanta sporting goods man Dan Smith offers this tip to fishermen, particularly those seeking crappie this time of the year: "Use live bait, fishing 6 to 24 inches deep. Use wet flies, letting them drift naturally 6 to 8 inches below the surface." . . . Tommy Shaw's Clark Hill report is encouraging: J. L. Thomas (Augusta) caught a 6-pound bass on a minnow. . . . Russell Lewis (Ft. Gordon) caught four bass, up to 9½ pounds, on minnows. . . . and John Eubanks (Appling) caught a 5½-pounder on a minnow. . . . Atlanta's Izaak Walton League meeting Tuesday night at 8 o'clock will hear S. P. Cronheim, a mineral expert who has worked a gold claim for 20 years. Meeting is at Gordy Tire Co., just off Expressway at 14th street.

UNDERWATER TIPS

Never Dive Alone, Warns Frogman Fane

The Atlanta following of one of the world's fastest growing sports, skin diving, last week got some "skin-fresh" tips from Navy frogman Francis Fane, the man at the top of "who's who underwater" list.

Cmdr. Fane was in Atlanta in connection with the promotion of a movie, "Underwater Warrior." The movie is based on Fane's life.

He is credited with bringing the first aqualing to the United States and is called the "father" of the Navy's Underwater Demolition Team program.

Speaking to the Atlanta Skin Divers, a group of some 40 underwater sportsmen and women, sponsored by the Atlanta YMCA, Fane cited some rules of diving that have made the program nearly free of accidents.

"We never let our men dive alone," Fane said. "Anything can happen in that little world underwater. And it's an iron-clad rule, no diving alone."

Fane called the diving instruction of such groups as the Atlanta YMCA sponsors another must. "There's a whole lot to know about the human body before you go to extreme depths, and diving without any instruction is extremely dangerous," he cautioned. Fane holds the Navy deep-dive record of 253 feet during a search for a lost B36 bomber off the coast of Southern California.

Bill Festerman, an Atlanta YMCA instructor, said the local club usually swells to well over 100 members every year at this time.

Both Fane and Festerman were talking about "the lure of the underwater."

"You know fish see skin divers and think they are just another species of fish," said Festerman.

"And it's something like flying. You don't have any ties with the ground."

Fane was lured to diving even before he knew how to swim.

"When I got interested in diving back in 1945 I had to go to the YMCA in Chicago first and learn to swim," Fane said. "And even though diving is my work, it's what I do for leisure, too. We live on the coast of California, and my family spends time with me diving."

Atlanta's club meets once a week the year around. Summer weekend trips are made to Panama City, Fla., by some of the club members. Feature diving trip of the group is a one-week vacation cruise to the Bahama Islands on a charter boat.

Club members also offer their services to area boaters and fishermen for help in salvaging valuable articles that go overboard.—CARSON.

Family Cruisers, Runabouts Steal Spotlight at Boat Show

Fishing Value Disregarded

Family cruisers and runabouts. Those are the two style crafts commanding most of the attention in this 8th Southeast Boat and Vacation Show now in session at Municipal Auditorium.

The question of "what style" was put to some two dozen boat show patrons Monday and these were the answers that turned up.

'Buyers' Flock To Auditorium

"We wouldn't consider putting this much money (pointing to a price tag) into something the whole family can't use," one said. "And our children are too small for a runabout."

Another answered: "We don't care for the runabout as much as a cruiser, but the kids insist on something to pull the skis."

Scarcely more than three or four persons said they took into consideration what kind of fishing boat their craft would make.

"We do some trolling from the cruiser we have now," one woman sailor explained. "It has an outboard on it, so it works just fine. When my husband fishes he always rents just a little fishing boat. We are planning to trade our cruiser for an inboard, but we don't fish enough for it really to matter."

Monday night's crowds were not quite up to the pace of Friday, Saturday and Sunday, but one dealer noted there were "more prospective buyers."

Mrs. Jacqueline Slaton, secretary of the Marine Trade Assn. of Metropolitan Atlanta and one of the few women boat dealers in the United States, had this explanation of the show's function:

"We don't try to sell boats here. Just get them interested in what boats we handle then invite them to our store."

Another Atlanta dealer, George Steffner, noted that family cruisers and runabouts were far out front in popularity so far as what the show customers want to see.

Here's Where Wild Goose Goes—a Pond

Several weeks ago the goose stopped at the pond of Jackson P. Dick on Mt. Paran road in Northwest Atlanta.

Dick noticed the goose on the pond before the recent cold weather. When the pond froze over, the goose left. When it thawed, the goose came back, but with a crippled leg.

The Dicks offered the goose some grains of corn one day, so he's decided to stay.

Nebraska Upsets No. 1 K-Staters

Huskies Lose

Boozer, Bow, 55-48

LINCOLN, Neb., March 3 (AP)—Nebraska handed Kansas State, the No. 1 rated basketball team of the nation, a stunning 55 to 48 defeat tonight.

It was the second defeat for Kansas State in 22 games and the first in 11 Big Eight Conference starts this season. Nebraska is 10-12 for the season and 5-6 in the conference.

It was the second stunning upset victory in a row for Nebraska, the Huskies having whipped Kansas in Lincoln a week ago last Saturday.

Kansas State played without Jack Paar, 6-9 pivot man, and lost Bob Boozer, the team's leading scorer, midway in the second half, on fouls.

Nebraska trailed early in the game but caught up about halfway through the first half and the lead switched several times before Nebraska opened a three-point gap and went to rest with a 24-21 halftime lead.

Boozer, who scored state's first 12 points, had 17 at the half and had been charged with three fouls.

Nebraska, playing a deliberate style of game and succeeding in breaking through the K-State defense for good shots, pulled into a 33-24 lead in the early minutes of the second half. Boozer had by then picked up a fourth foul. He went out of the game with the score 40-30 and eight and a half minutes of game time left.

Fullmer Whips Milo Savage

SALT LAKE CITY, March 3 (AP)—Gene Fullmer, No. 2-ranking former middleweight champion, bulldozed his way to a 10-round unanimous decision tonight over cautious Milo Savage. Fullmer weighed 159, his former sparring partner, 160.

Williams' 22-Point Pace Leads Clarkston Win

Clarkston advanced the hard way over Schiltz in the Georgia AAU basketball tournament Monday at the Sports Arena, but must win a protest session to make it valid.

Clarkston, led by Punk Williams' 22-point effort, edged Schiltz, 52-48, but the losers lodged a protest, claiming Williams tried out with the Atlanta Crackers last season and possibly signed a professional baseball contract.

Atlanta Tomboys moved into the finals in the Class A women's division by routing the Peaches, 49-39, with Margaret Collins scoring 29 points.

Atlanta Boys Club whipped YMCA, 57-47, and Eagles Club dropped Maple St. of Rome, 58-53.

Frederick, Lee Auburn's '58-59 Cage Captains

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION
AUBURN, Ala., March 3—Rex Frederick and Jimmy Lee were elected co-captains of the 1958-59 Auburn basketball team, it was announced today by coach Joel Eaves. Both were regulars during the past two seasons.

Lee, a 6-1 sharpshooter from Columbus, Ga., was the leading Auburn point producer as a sophomore in 1956-57 with 334 points.

Frederick, a 6-5 all-Southeastern Conference selection from Comer, led the Tiger scoring column this season with 355 points and gathered in 325 rebounds.

BASEBALL IN BRIEF

Labine's Satisfied With Relief; Conley, Buhl Sign Braves' Pacts

Clem Labine has been on relief since 1949, and he thinks it's just fine.

"I'd rather relieve than start now," the bullpen ace of the Los Angeles Dodgers says, adding philosophically: "The hours are good and the pay is good."

Labine started relieving at St. Paul when Walter Alston, current Dodger manager, was managing there. Now 31, with 13 years of pro ball behind him, he is learning a new pitch.

It's a screwball change of pace. SIGNEES—Gene Conley and Bob Buhl, two Milwaukee pitching mainstays, came to terms Monday via telephone conversations with Braves' General Manager John Quinn. . . . Shortstop Chico Carrasquel became the last Cleveland Indian to sign his contract. . . . Pittsburgh signed three youngsters and assigned them to Grand Forks, N.D. They are: Bobby Lee Smith, 20, catcher; Ronald Pope Gray, 20, outfielder, and

Richard David Haessly, 18, pitcher. . . . First baseman

Baseball in Brief

Southpaw Dick Littlefield became the first Chicago Cub training casualty when a line drive hit his right forearm. Ex-Atlanta Cracker Chuck Tanner hit the line drive. . . . Ted Williams' bothersome left ankle was submitted for further X-rays. Results won't be known until Tuesday. . . . Willie Mays showed up at Phoenix nursing a bad cold, but he took batting practice. His San Francisco Giant teammates Daryl Spencer and Stu Miller were out with minor ailments. . . . Kansas City left-hander Walt Craddock was sent to hospital with what is feared a slipped disk.

DIAMOND DOTS—Yankee Manager Casey Stengel promised more rest for star catcher Yogi Berra. "He doesn't want to catch any more doubleheaders and I agree with him," Casey said. . . .

New pitchers trying to win a place on the St. Louis Cardinal staff will do most of the firing in early exhibition games, pilot Fred Hutchinson said. . . . The Brooklyn Dodgers announced a reorganization of their top echelon front office personnel. The title of general manager was added to E. J. (Buzzie) Bavasi. Fresno Thompson continues as vice president and will be director of minor league operations. Al Campanis is director of scouting. Richard Walsh becomes assistant to Bavasi.

WEATHER DEPT.: Rain ruined a Detroit Tiger workout at Lakeland, Fla., postponing club's first intrasquad game. . . . It was the same at Tampa where rain interfered with the Chicago White Sox practice plans.

Southwest Banking On Tested Pitching

New Coach Brannon Rebuilds
For Big Date With Sylvan

By RALPH GREGORY

Nearly everybody's new to the Southwest baseball plan, including the coach, and there's a get-acquainted program scheduled before the rebuilding can get under way.

Charlie Brannon, ex-Georgia Tech shortstop, is taking over for the first time as head coach and after two days of limited workouts he's found plenty of observation needed before a March 27 opener with Sylvan, one of the City League favorites this season.

"This'll be a young team," Brannon allowed Monday, "and Charlie Brannon right now we can't even be sure which of the young ones will be playing. We've only got four boys who played very much and we'll have to shift one of them."

Pitching, the critical point in a short season such as the high-schoolers play, is perhaps Southwest's strongest spot. Returning are senior righthanders Norman Banks and Larry Davis.

They were the top two hurlers on last year's sub-region runnerup.

Also back are outfielder Johnny Daher and first baseman Bobby Sharpe. Daher will have some readjustment to do, however. Brannon plans to move him behind the plate to fill the catching job left vacant by graduated Bobby Samples.

Rest of the positions will belong to rookies.

Transfer John Sellmer, a junior from California, has looked promising at shortstop and will probably team with sophomore Larry Dean as the keystone pair. Dean made the Houston Astros games trip last season and is running just ahead of Harlen Wooten at second base.

Senior Don Norris heads the three-man fight at third base with Joel Stone and Elliot Pryon.

Fred Boling is one outfield candidate and may be joined by sophomore Johnny Dustan, now working out at first. Pitchers will also be tested for extra duty.

"I don't know whether they've ever played in the outfield," Brannon said, "but they'll sure get a trial there."

Junior Kenneth Weir, a right-hander, and sophomore Don Shi, a left-hander are two more mound candidates. They'll be needed, for the team will be playing three

Other candidates are Jerry Mullins and Roger Landers as catchers; Jim Best at shortstop.

LARRY DAVIS
In Fact, Doubly So

Skin Coach Signed for 5

WASHINGTON, March 3 (AP)—George Preston Marshall, mellowing owner of the Washington Redskins, cast aside precedent today by handing coach Joe Kuharich a brand-new five-year contract.

Marshall and Kuharich burned up a three-year agreement which had another season to go and signed a new one which for length rivals any ever concluded in pro football and certainly exceeds any in Redskins annals.

Neither would mention salary, but it was generally assumed the 40-year-old Kuharich got an increase.

The display of brotherhood came as something of a surprise to Redskins historians for two reasons: In days gone by at this time of year, it was more in tradition for Marshall to be (1) firing a coach and hunting up a new one or (2) denying he was about to fire a coach and hunt up a new one.

Blemker's Back on Hill

ond, and he looks great there.

"Joe Chambers, the Carrollton boy, was ineligible last year, but he is fitting right into the center-field job. He once hit a home run over the right field fence at Ponce de Leon Park in the Light-house Game.

"Robbie Neely's running at shortstop. He and Veezey also were teammates in the Light-house Game (now the North-South game cosponsored by The Constitution)."

Pittard has to build a new infield, but he feels the material is available.

Both Blemker and Chambliss were giving the ball long rides Monday.

Randall, football manager Charlie Reeves and sophomore Jack Robinson are in the infield scuffle.

Earl Moore, like Thomas a co-captain and all-SEC performer, slammed five homers and drove in 30 runs last year. He is back in right field.

Bill Sailors, a 1952 Jacket, Bob Stanley and sophomore Jerry Meyer, also a cager, are out for the outfield.

Jimmy Nelson, minus 35 pounds and looking fit at 197, and Jimbo Towery are pitching holdovers.

Predictions?

"We lost seven one-run games year before last," Pittard said, "and won four or five last year. Our lack of experience could hurt us in the close ones this season."

String of 3 'Blue Mondays' Broken in Sloppy Session

NEW YORK, March 3 (AP)—The stock market broke a string of three "Blue Mondays" and advanced under the leadership of oils and rubbers today.

The market on average matched Friday's rise—and did it on slightly better volume.

It was a slow and sloppy session most of the day. Higher at the start, it lapsed into an irregular state by afternoon. Solid advances and fairly good demand for the pacemaking issues touched off a general improvement in the final hour.

OIL OUTLOOK

A weekend statement by Gulf Oil which said the outlook for the oil industry was more optimistic and that there is no need for a cut in crude oil prices was the key development credited for the rise in oil shares.

Rubbers, which have taken quite a beating of late, tagged along. So did selected issues in various fields. A number of these were benefited by short covering.

While there was a good scattering of losers in various sections, notably rails which were down on average, there wasn't a single loser among the 15 most active stocks.

FAVORABLE NEWS

Despite the fact that the business recession has become a matter of increasing public concern, the weekend news contained favorable items. They included signs of improvement reported by some steel producers and expectations of quick action by the Senate to spur home building.

American Stock Exchange prices were generally higher on volume of 500,000 shares compared with 510,000 Friday. Gainers included Creole Petroleum, Diners Club, Scurry-Rainbow Oil and Tri-Continental warrants.

Corporate bonds were higher on fairly good volume.

U.S. government bonds declined in over-the-counter trading.

The bidding:
 South West North East
 1 heart Pass 2 hearts 3 clubs
 3 hearts Pass 4 hearts Pass
 Pass Pass

Opening lead: Queen of clubs.
 Declarer postponed the extraction of trumps today as a temporizing measure in order to determine what tactics were best suited to this particular hand.

West opened the queen of clubs and South ruffed the second round of that suit. He observed that if he drew trumps he could cash only nine tricks—five hearts, three diamonds and the ace of spades. The 10th trick must therefore be developed in the spade suit.

There is an alternate line of play, which involves reversing the dummy, making North the master trump hand and ruffing three clubs in the South hand. Which plan to adopt would depend upon how the play developed. If one of the opponents had four trumps, then declarer would be unable to ruff clubs in his own hand and still draw trumps.

At trick three, declarer therefore led a low spade to the ten in dummy and East won with the queen. East returned the king of clubs, which declarer ruffed with the nine of hearts. West discarded the five of spades. Declarer then tested the trumps, playing first the ace and then the ten, overtaking with the jack in dummy. When East showed out, South saw that he would be unable to draw all of West's trumps.

The contract hinged on his being able to successfully cash all his side winners. So he played three rounds of diamonds and then the ace of spades. When West followed to everything, declarer was home. He ruffed the dummy's last club for his ninth trick, with North's queen of hearts still to be scored.

Emory Names Klein To Head Hospital Course

Robert Klein has been appointed director of Emory University's graduate program of hospital administration. Gordon Siekin dean of the business school said Sunday.

A graduate of the University of Chicago, Klein served as assistant superintendent of city hospitals at Cleveland, Ohio, from 1951-55. In 1956, he became assistant professor of hospital administration at the University of Pittsburgh.

Siekin said 13 students are enrolled in Emory's hospital administration courses.

'Whosoever Is Born of God Doth Not Practice Sin'

QUESTION: There is a verse in the Bible that says, "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin." I used to think of myself as a Christian but I know that I have sinned. Does that mean that I am not a child of God?—S. C.

ANSWER: I think you are referring to the Scripture found in 1 John 3:9. Many people are confused by this verse. What it actually means is that whoever is begotten of God does not sin as a way of life or he does not continually practice sin. Don't let your failures or your weaknesses discourage you. If in your heart you desire to live in fellowship with God, and if you have confessed Christ as your Savior, you have the assurance that His blood does cleanse all sin.

The verse should be translated thus: "Whosoever is born of God doth not practice sin."

 that American families —and our economy—
 can count on this year

Life insurance payments to the American people have increased steadily for the past 14 years—and 1958 will be no exception. This year, policyholders and their families will receive $7 billion from their policies with life insurance companies. More than half of this money will go to policyholders themselves.

Will help millions of families

For many families, these life insurance payments will make the difference between continuing a reasonable standard of living and just "getting by." And this money will tide millions of policyholders over serious financial emergencies... help pay for children's education... or assure an income at retirement.

These life insurance payments will also help all of us. For they become $7 billion of buying power that will have a healthy, beneficial effect on our entire economy.

Important source of new capital

Through their premium payments, owners of life insurance policies also furnish a large share of the capital needed for America's growth. This year alone, they will supply a total of $5 billion of new capital, creating jobs and opportunities all over America.

Savings combat inflation, too

As America's most widely used form of thrift, life insurance illustrates the essential role of the saver in keeping our economy strong. And the saver contributes in another way—by helping to hold back inflation and the rising prices that rob us all.

Today, 109 million policyholders are counting on their life insurance. The nation, in turn, can count on them and other savers as a powerful force in keeping our economy sound and growing.
